Advertiſement.

MR. POPE, in his laſt illneſs, amuſed himſelf, amidſt the care of his higher concerns, in preparing a corrected and complete Edition of his Writings[a]; and, with his uſual delicacy, was even ſolicitous to prevent any ſhare of the offence they might occaſion, from falling on the Friend whom he had engaged to give them to the Public[b].

In diſcharge of this truſt, the Public has here a complete Edition of his Works; executed in ſuch a manner, as, I am perſuaded, would have been to his ſatisfaction.

a The

[a] —"I own the late encroachments upon my conſtitution make me willing to ſee the end of all further care about me or my works. I would reſt for the one in a full reſignation of my Being to be diſpoſed of by the Father of all Mercy; and for the other (though indeed a trifle, yet a trifle may be ſome example) I would commit them to the candour of a ſenſible and reflecting judge, rather than to the malice of every ſhort-ſighted and malevolent critic, or inadvertent and cenſorious reader. And no hand can ſet them in ſo good a light, &c." Let. cxx. to Mr. W.

[b] —"I alſo give and bequeath to the ſaid Mr. Warburton, the property of all ſuch of my works already printed as he hath written or ſhall write Commentaries or Notes upon, and which I have not otherwiſe diſpoſed of or alienated; and as he ſhall publiſh WITHOUT FUTURE ALTERATIONS." —— His laſt Will and Teſtament.

The Editor hath not, for the ſake of profit, ſuffered the Author's Name to be made cheap by a Subſcription; nor his Works to be defrauded of their due Honours by a vulgar or inelegant Impreſſion; nor his memory to be diſgraced by any pieces unworthy of his talents or virtue.

If the Public hath waited longer than the deference due to it ſhould have ſuffered, it was owing to a reaſon which the Editor need not make a ſecret. It was his regard to the family-intereſts of his deceaſed Friend. Mr. Pope, at his death, left large impreſſions of ſeveral parts of his Works, unſold; the property of which was adjudged to belong to his Executors; and the Editor was willing they ſhould have time to diſpoſe of them to the beſt advantage, before the publication of this Edition (which hath been long prepared) ſhould put a ſtop to the ſale.

But it may be proper to be a little more particular concerning the ſuperiority of this Edition above all the preceding; ſo far as Mr. Pope himſelf was concerned. What the Editor hath done, the Reader muſt collect for himſelf.

The FIRST Volume, and the original poems in the SECOND, are here printed from a copy corrected throughout by the Author himſelf, even to the very preface: Which, with with ſeveral additional notes in his own hand, he delivered to the Editor a little before his death. The Juvenile tranſlations, in the other part of the SECOND Volume, it was never his intention to bring into this Edition of his Works, on account of the levity of ſome, the freedom of others, and the little importance of any. But theſe being the property of other men, the Editor had it not in his power to follow the Author's intention.

The THIRD Volume, all but the Eſſay on Man (which, together with the Eſſay on Criticiſm, the Author, a little before his death, had corrected and publiſhed in Quarto, as a ſpecimen of his projected Edition) was printed by him in his laſt illneſs (but never publiſhed) in the manner it is now given. The diſpoſition of the Epiſtle on the Characters of Men is quite altered; that on the Characters of Women, much enlarged; and the Epiſtles on Riches and Taſte corrected and improved. To theſe advantages of the THIRD Volume, muſt be added a great number of fine verſes taken from the Author's Manuſcript-copies of theſe poems, communicated by him for this purpoſe to the Editor. Theſe, when he firſt puliſhed the poems to which they belong, he thought proper, for various reaſons, to omit. Some from the Manuſcript-copy of the Eſſay on Man, which tended to diſ-credit fate, and to recommend the moral government of God, had, by the Editor's advice, been restored to their places in the last Edition of that Poem. The rest, together with others of the like sort from his Manuscript-copy of the other Ethic Epistles, are here inserted at the bottom of the page, under the title of Variations.

The FOURTH Volume contains the Satires; with their Prologue, the Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot; and Epilogue, the two poems intitled MDCCXXXVIII. The Prologue and Epilogue are here given with the like advantages as the Ethic Epistles in the foregoing Volume, that is to say, with the Variations, or additional verses from the Author's Manuscripts. The Epilogue to the Satires is likewise inriched with many and large notes now first printed from the Author's own Manuscript.

The FIFTH Volume contains a correcter and completer Edition of the Dunciad than hath been hitherto published; of which, at present I have only this further to add, That it was at my request he laid the plan of a fourth Book. I often told him, It was pity so fine a poem should remain disgraced by the meanness of its subject, the most insignificant of all Dunces, bad Rymers and malevolent Cavillers: That he ought to raise and enoble it by pointing his Satire against the most moſt pernicious of all, Minute-philoſophers and Free-thinkers. I imagined, too, it was for the intereſts of Religion to have it known, that ſo great a Genius had a due abhorrence of theſe peſts of Virtue and Society. He came readily into my opinion; but, at the ſame time, told me it would create him many Enemies. He was not miſtaken. For tho' the terror of his pen kept them for ſome time in reſpect, yet on his death they roſe with unreſtrained fury in numerous Coffee-houſe tales, and Grub-ſtreet libels. The plan of this admirable Satire was artfully contrived to ſhew, that the follies and defects of a faſhionable EDUCATION naturally led to, and neceſſarily ended in, FREE-THINKING; with deſign to point out the only remedy adequate to ſo fatal an evil. It was to advance the ſame ends of virtue and religion, that the Editor prevailed on him to alter every thing in his moral writings that might be ſuſpected of having the leaſt glance towards Fate or NATURALISM; and to add what was proper to convince the world, that he was warmly on the ſide of moral Government and a revealed Will. And it would be injuſtice to his memory not to declare that he embraced theſe occaſions with the moſt unfeigned pleaſure.

The SIXTH Volume conſiſts of Mr. Pope's miſcellaneous pieces in verſe and proſe. Amongſt the Verſe ſeveral fine poems make now their firſt appearance in his Works. And of the Proſe, all that is good, and nothing but what is exquiſitely ſo, will be found in this Edition.

The SEVENTH, EIGHTH, and * NINTH Volumes conſiſt entirely of his Letters. The more valuable, as they are the only true models which we, or perhaps any of our neighbours have, of familiar Epiſtles. This collection is now made more complete by the addition of ſeveral new pieces. Yet, excepting a ſhort explanatory letter to Col. M. and the Letters to Mr. A. and Mr. W. (the latter of which are given to ſhew the Editor's inducements, and the engagements he was under, to intend the care of this Edition) excepting theſe, I ſay, the reſt are all here publiſhed from the Author's own printed tho' not publiſhed, copies delivered to the Editor.

On the whole, the Advantages of this Edition, above the preceding, are theſe, That it is the firſt complete collection which has ever been made of his original Writings; That all his principal poems, of early or later date, are here given to the public with his laſt corrections and improvements; That a great a great number of his verſes are here firſt printed from the Manuſcript-copies of his principal poems of later date; That many new notes of the Author's are here added to his Poems; and laſtly, that ſeveral pieces, both in proſe and verſe, make now their firſt appearance before the Public.

* N. B. The ninth Volume makes the ſeventh Volume of Dr. Swift's Works, printed by George Faulkner, which may be had alone.

The Author's life deſerves a juſt Volume; and the Editor intends to give it. For to have been one of the firſt Poets in the world is but his ſecond praiſe. He was in a higher Claſs. He was one of the nobleſt works of God. He was an honeſt Man[a]. A Man, who alone poſſeſſed more real virtue than, in very corrupt times, needing a Satiriſt like him, will ſometimes fall to the ſhare of multitudes. In this hiſtory of his life[b], will be contained a large account of his writings; a critique on the nature, force, and extent of his genius, exemplified from theſe writings; and a vindication of his moral character exemplified by his more diſtinguiſhed virtues; his filial piety, his diſintereſted friendſhips, his reverence for the conſtitution of his country, his love and admiration of VIRTUE, and, (what was the neceſſary effect) his hatred and contempt of VICE, his extenſive charity to [a] "A wit's a feather, and a chief's a rod,

"An honeſt man's the nobleſt work of God."

[b] It will be printed in the ſame form with this and every future edition of his works, ſo as to make a part of them.

to the indigent, his warm benevolence to mankind, his ſupreme veneration of the Deity, and, above all, his ſincere belief of Revelation. Nor ſhall his faults be concealed. It is not for the intereſts of his Virtues that they ſhould. Nor indeed could they be concealed if we were ſo minded, for they ſhine thro' his Virtues; no man being more a dupe to the ſpecious appearances of Virtue in others. In a word I mean not to be his Panegyriſt, but his Hiſtorian. And may I, when Envy and Calumny take the ſame advantage of my abſence (for, while I live, I will freely truſt it to my Life to confute them) may I find a Friend as careful of my honeſt fame as I have been of His! Together with his Works, he hath bequeathed me his DUNCES. So that as the property is transferred, I could wiſh they would now let his memory alone. The veil which Death draws over the Good is ſo ſacred, that to throw dirt upon the Shrine ſcandalizes even Barbarians. And though Rome permitted her Slaves to calumniate her beſt Citizens on the day of Triumph, yet the ſame petulancy at their Funeral would have been rewarded with execration and a gibbet.

PREFACE.

I Am inclined to think that both the writers of books, and the readers of them, are generally not a little unreaſonable in their expectations. The firſt ſeem to fancy that the world muſt approve whatever they produce, and the latter to imagine that authors are obliged to pleaſe them at any rate. Methinks, as on the one hand, no ſingle man is born with a right of controuling the opinions of all the reſt; ſo on the other, the world has no title to demand, that the whole care and time of any particular perſon ſhould be ſacrificed to its entertainment. Therefore I cannot but believe that writers and readers are under equal obligations, for as much fame, or pleaſure, as each affords the other.

Every one acknowledges, it would be a wild notion to expect perfection in any work of man: and yet one would think the contrary was taken for granted, by the judgment commonly paſt upon Poems. A Critic ſuppoſes he has done his part, if he proves a writer to have failed in an expreſſion, or erred in any particular point: and can it then be wondered at, if the Poets in general ſeem reſolved not to own themſelves in any error? For as long as one ſide will make no allowances, the other will be brought to no acknowledgements [a].

I am afraid this extreme zeal on both ſides is ill-placed; Poetry and Criticiſm being by no means the univerſal concern of the world, but only the affair of idle men who write in their cloſets, and of idle men who read there.

Yet ſure upon the whole, a bad Author deſerves better uſage than a bad Critic: for a Writer's endeavour, for the moſt part, is to pleaſe his Readers, and he fails merely through the misfortune of an ill judgment; but ſuch a Critic's is to put them out of humour; a deſign he could never go upon without both that and an ill temper.

I think a good deal may be ſaid to extenuate the fault of bad Poets. What we call a Genius, is hard to be diſtinguiſhed by a man himſelf, from a ſtrong inclination: and if his genius be ever ſo great, he cannot at firſt diſcover it any other way, than by giving way to that prevalent propenſity which renders him the more liable to be miſtaken. The only method he has, is to make the experiment periment by writing, and appealing to the judgment of others: now if he happens to write ill (which is certainly no ſin in itſelf) he is immediately made an object of ridicule. I wiſh we had the humanity to reflect that even the worſt authors might, in their endeavour to pleaſe us, deſerve ſomething at our hands. We have no cauſe to quarrel with them but for their obſtinacy in perſiſting to write; and this too may admit of alleviating circumſtances. Their particular friends may be either ignorant, or inſincere; and the reſt of the world in general is too well bred to ſhock them with a truth, which generally their Bookſellers are the firſt that inform them of. This happens not till they have ſpent too much of their time, to apply to any profeſſion which might better fit their talents; and till ſuch talents as they have are ſo far diſcredited as to be but of ſmall ſervice to them. For (what is the hardeſt caſe imaginable) the reputation of a man generally depends upon the firſt ſteps he makes in the world, and people will eſtabliſh their opinion of us, from what we do at that ſeaſon when we have leaſt judgment to direct us.

[a] In the former editions it was thus — For as long as one ſide deſpiſes a well meant endeavour, the other will not be ſatisfied with a moderate approbation — But the Author altered it, as theſe words were rather a conſequence from the concluſion he would draw, than the concluſion itſelf, which he has now inſerted.

On the other hand, a good Poet no ſooner communicates his works with the ſame deſire of information, but it is imagined he is a vain young creature given up to the ambition of fame; when perhaps the poor man is all the while trembling with the fear of being ridiculous. If he is made to hope he may pleaſe the world, he falls under very unlucky circumſtances: for, from the moment he prints, he muſt expect to hear no more truth, than if he were a Prince, or a Beauty. If he has not very good ſenſe (and indeed there are twenty men of wit, for one man of ſenſe) his living thus in a courſe of flattery may put him in no ſmall danger of becoming a Coxcomb: if he has, he will conſequently have ſo much diffidence as not to reap any great ſatisfaction from his praiſe; ſince, if it be given to his face, it can ſcarce be diſtinguiſhed from flattery, and if in his abſence, it is hard to be certain of it. Were he ſure to be commended by the beſt and moſt knowing, he is as ſure of being envied by the worſt and moſt ignorant, which are the majority; for it is with a fine Genius as with a fine faſhion, all thoſe are diſpleaſed at it who are not able to follow it: and it is to be feared that eſteem will ſeldom do any man ſo much good, as ill-will does him harm. Then there is a third claſs of people who make the largeſt part of mankind, thoſe of ordinary or indifferent capacities; and theſe (to a man) will hate, or ſuſpect him: a hundred honeſt Gentlemen will dread him as a Wit, and a hundred innocent Women as a Satiriſt. In a word, whatever be his fate in Poetry, it is ten

ten to one but he must give up all the reasonable aims of life for it. There are indeed some advantages accruing from a Genius to Poetry, and they are all I can think of: the agreeable power of self-amusement when a man is idle or alone; the privilege of being admitted into the best company; and the freedom of saying as many careless things as other people, without being so severely remarked upon.

I believe, if any one, early in his life, should contemplate the dangerous fate of authors, he would scarce be of their number on any consideration. The life of a Wit is a warfare upon earth; and the present spirit of the learned world is such, that to attempt to serve it (any way) one must have the constancy of a martyr, and a resolution to suffer for its sake. I could wish people would believe what I am pretty certain they will not, that I have been much less concerned about Fame than I durst declare till this occasion, when methinks I should find more credit than I could heretofore: since my writings have had their fate already, and it is too late to think of prepossessing the reader in their favour. I would plead it as some merit in me, that the world has never been prepared for these Trifles by Prefaces, byassed by recommendations, dazled with the names of great Patrons, wheedled with fine reasons and pretences, or troubled with excuſes. I confeſs it was want of conſideration that made me an author; I writ becauſe it amuſed me; I corrected becauſe it was as pleaſant to me to correct as to write; and I publiſhed becauſe I was told I might pleaſe ſuch as it was a credit to pleaſe. To what degree I have done this, I am really ignorant; I had too much fondneſs for my productions to judge of them at firſt, and too much judgment to be pleaſed with them at laſt. But I have reaſon to think they can have no reputation which will continue long, or which deſerves to do ſo: for they have always fallen ſhort not only of what I read of others, but even of my own Ideas of Poetry.

If any one ſhould imagine I am not in earneſt, I deſire him to reflect, that the Ancients (to ſay the leaſt of them) had as much Genius as we: and that to take more pains, and employ more time, cannot fail to produce more complete pieces. They conſtantly apply'd themſelves not only to that art, but to that ſingle branch of an art, to which their talent was moſt powerfully bent; and it was the buſineſs of their lives to correct and finiſh their works for poſterity. If we can pretend to have uſed the ſame induſtry, let us expect the ſame immortality: Tho' if we took the ſame care, we ſhould ſtill lie under a farther misfortune: they writ in languages that became univerſal and everlaſting, while ours are extremely limited both in extent and in duration. A mighty foundation for our pride! when the utmoſt we can hope, is but to be read in one Iſland, and to be thrown aſide at the end of one Age.

All that is left us is to recommend our productions by the imitation of the Ancients: and it will be found true, that, in every age, the higheſt character for ſenſe and learning has been obtain'd by thoſe who have been moſt indebted to them. For, to ſay truth, whatever is very good ſenſe, muſt have been common ſenſe in all times; and what we call Learning, is but the knowledge of the ſenſe of our predeceſſors. Therefore they who ſay our thoughts are not our own, becauſe they reſemble the Ancients, may as well ſay our faces are not our own, becauſe they are like our Fathers: And indeed it is very unreaſonable, that people ſhould expect us to be Scholars, and yet be angry to find us ſo.

I fairly confeſs that I have ſerv'd myſelf all I could by reading; that I made uſe of the judgment of authors dead and living; that I omitted no means in my power to be inform'd of my errors, both by my friends and enemies: But the true reaſon theſe pieces are not more correct, is owing to the conſideration how ſhort a time they, and I, have to live: One may be aſhamed to conſume half one's days in bringing ſenſe and rhyme together; and what Critic can be ſo unreaſonable, as not to leave a man time enough for any more ſerious employment, or more agreeable amuſement?

The only plea I ſhall uſe for the favour of the public, is, that I have as great a reſpect for it, as moſt authors have for themſelves; and that I have ſacrificed much of my own ſelf-love for its ſake, in preventing not only many mean things from ſeeing the light, but many which I thought tolerable. I would not be like thoſe Authors, who forgive themſelves ſome particular lines for the ſake of a whole Poem, and vice verſa a whole Poem for the ſake of ſome particular lines. I believe no one qualification is ſo likely to make a good writer, as the power of rejecting his own thoughts; and it muſt be this (if any thing) that can give me a chance to be one. For what I have publiſhed, I can only hope to be pardon'd; but for what I have burn'd, I deſerve to be prais'd. On this account the world is under ſome obligation to me, and owes me the juſtice in return, to look upon no verſes as mine that are not inſerted in this collection. And perhaps nothing could make it worth my while to own what are really ſo, but to avoid the imputation of ſo many dull and immoral things, as partly by malice, and partly by ignorance, have been aſcribed aſcribed to me. I muſt farther acquit myſelf of the preſumption of having lent my name to recommend any Miſcellanies or Works of other men; a thing I never thought becoming a perſon who has hardly credit enough to anſwer for his own.

In this office of collecting my pieces, I am altogether uncertain, whether to look upon myſelf as a man building a monument, or burying the dead.

If Time ſhall make it the former, may theſe Poems (as long as they laſt) remain as a teſtimony, that their Author never made his talents ſubſervient to the mean and unworthy ends of Party or Self-intereſt; the gratification of public prejudices, or private paſſions; the flattery of the undeſerving, or the inſult of the unfortunate. If I have written well, let it be conſider'd that 'tis what no man can do without good ſenſe, a quality that not only renders one capable of being a good writer, but a good man. And if I have made any acquiſition in the opinion of any one under the notion of the former, let it be continued to me under no other title than that of the latter.

But if this publication be only a more ſolemn funeral of my Remains, I deſire it may be known that I die in charity, and in my ſenſes; without any murmurs againſt the juſtice ſtice of this age, or any mad appeals to poſterity. I declare I ſhall think the world in the right, and quietly ſubmit to every truth which time ſhall diſcover to the prejudice of theſe writings; not ſo much as wiſhing ſo irrational a thing, as that every body ſhould be deceived merely for my credit. However, I deſire it may then be conſidered, That there are very few things in this collection, which were not written under the age of five and twenty: ſo that my youth may be made (as it never fails to be in executions) a caſe of compaſſion. That I was never ſo concerned about my works as to vindicate them in print, believing, if any thing was good, it would defend itſelf, and what was bad could never be defended. That I uſed no artifice to raiſe or continue a reputation, depreciated no dead author I was obliged to, bribed no living one with unjuſt praiſe, inſulted no adverſary with ill language; or when I could not attack a Rival's works, encouraged reports againſt his Morals. To conclude, if this volume periſh, let it ſerve as a warning to the Critics, not to take too much pains for the future to deſtroy ſuch things as will die of themſelves; and a Memento mori to ſome of my vain contemporaries the Poets, to teach them that, when real merit is wanting, it avails nothing to have been encouraged ged by the great, commended by the eminent, and favoured by the public in general.

Variations in the Author's Manuscript Preface.

AFTER pag. v. l. 10. it followed thus---
For my part, I confess, had I seen things in this view at first, the public had never been troubled either with my writings, or with this apology for them, I am sensible how difficult it is to speak of one's self with decency: but when a man must speak of himself, the best way is to speak truth of himself, or, he may depend upon it, others will do it for him. I'll therefore make this Preface a general confession of all my thoughts of my own Poetry, resolving with the same freedom to expose myself, as it is in the power of any other to expose them. In the first place I thank God and nature, that I was born with a love to poetry; for nothing more conduces to fill up all the intervals of our time, or, if rightly used, to make the whole whole courſe of life entertaining: Cantantes licet (minus via lædet). 'Tis a vaſt happineſs to poſſeſs the pleaſures of the head, the only pleaſures in which a man is ſufficient to himſelf, and the only part of him which, to his ſatisfaction, he can employ all day long. The Muſes are amicæ omnium horarum; and, like our gay acquaintance, the beſt company in the world as long as one expects no real ſervice from them. I confeſs there was a time when I was in love with myſelf, and my firſt productions were the children of ſelf love upon innocence. I had made an Epic Poem, and Panegyrics on all the Princes in Europe, and thought myſelf the greateſt genius that ever was. I can't but regret thoſe delightful viſions of my childhood, which, like the fine colours we ſee when our eyes are ſhut, are vaniſhed for ever. Many tryals and ſad experience have ſo undeceived me by degrees, that I am utterly at a loſs at what rate to value myſelf. As for fame I ſhall be glad of any I can get, and not repine at any I miſs; and as for vanity, I have enough to keep me from hanging myſelf, or even from wiſhing thoſe hanged who would take it away. It was this that made me write. The ſenſe of my faults made me correct: beſides that it was as pleaſant to me to correct as to write.

At

At p. vii. l. 22. In the first place I own that I have used my best endeavours to the finishing these pieces. That I made what advantage I could of the judgment of authors dead and living; and that I omitted no means in my power of being informed of my errors by my friends and by my enemies. And that I expect no favour on account of my youth, business, want of health, or any such idle excuses. But the true reason they are not yet more correct is owing to the consideration how short a time they and I have to live. A man that can expect but sixty years may be ashamed to employ thirty in measuring syllables and bringing sense and rhyme together. We spend our youth in pursuit of riches or fame, in hopes to enjoy them when we are old; and when we are old, we find it is too late to enjoy any thing. I therefore hope the Wits will pardon me, if I reserve some of my time to save my soul; and that some wise men will be of my opinion, even if I should think a part of it better spent in the enjoyments of life than in pleasing the critics.

ON

On Mr. POPE, and his Poems,

By His Grace

JOHN SHEFFIELD,

Duke of BUCKINGHAM.

WITH Age decay'd, with Courts and Bus'neſs tir'd,
Caring for nothing but what Eaſe requir'd;
Too dully ſerious for the Muſe's ſport,
And from the Critics ſafe arriv'd in Port;
I little thought of launching forth agen,
Amidſt advent'rous Rovers of the Pen;
And after ſo much undeſerv'd ſucceſs,
Thus hazarding at laſt to make it leſs.
Encomiums ſuit not this cenſorious time,
Itſelf a ſubject for ſatiric rhyme;
Ignorance honour'd, Wit and Worth defam'd,
Folly triumphant, and ev'n Homer blam'd!
But to this Genius, join'd with ſo much Art,
Such various Learning mix'd in ev'ry part,
Poets are bound a loud applauſe to pay;
Apollo bids it, and they muſt obey.
And yet ſo wonderful, ſublime a thing,
As the great ILIAD, ſcarce could make me ſing;
Except I juſtly could at once commend
A good Companion, and as firm a Friend.

One

One moral, or a mere well-natur'd deed
Can all desert and Sciences exceed.
'Tis great delight to laugh at some mens ways,
But a much greater to give Merit praise.

To Mr. POPE,

On his PASTORALS.

IN these more dull, as more censorious days,
When few dare give, and fewer merit praise,
A Muse sincere, that never Flatt'ry knew,
Pays what to friendship and desert is due.
Young, yet judicious; in your verse are found
Art strength'ning Nature, Sense improv'd by Sound.
Unlike those Wits, whose numbers glide along
So smooth, no thought e'er interrupts the song:
Laboriously enervate they appear,
And write not to the head, but to the ear:
Our minds unmov'd and unconcern'd they lull,
And are at best most musically dull;
So purling streams with even murmurs creep,
And hush the heavy hearers into sleep.
As smoothest speech is most deceitful found,
The smoothest numbers oft are empty sound.
But Wit and Judgment join at once in you,
Sprightly as Youth, as Age consummate too:
Your strains are regularly bold, and please
With unforc'd care, and unaffected ease,
With proper thoughts, and lively images:

Such

Such as by Nature to the Ancients ſhown,
Fancy improves, and judgment makes your own:
For great mens faſhions to be follow'd are,
Altho' diſgraceful 'tis their clothes to wear.
Some in a poliſh'd ſtyle write Paſtoral,
Arcadia ſpeaks the language of the Mall;
Like ſome fair Sheperdeſs, the Sylvan Muſe,
Should wear thoſe flow'rs her native fields produce;
And the true meaſure of the ſhepherd's wit
Should, like his garb, be for the Country fit:
Yet muſt his pure and unaffected thought
More nicely than the common ſwain's be wrought.
So, with becoming art, the Players dreſs
In ſilks the ſhepherd, and the ſhepherdeſs;
Yet ſtill unchang'd the form and mode remain,
Shap'd like the homely ruſſet of the ſwain.
Your rural Muſe appears to juſtify
The long loſt graces of Simplicity:
So rural beauties captivate our ſenſe
With virgin charms, and native excellence.
Yet long her Modeſty thoſe charms conceal'd,
'Till by mens Envy to the world reveal'd;
For Wits induſtrious to their trouble ſeem,
And needs will envy what they muſt eſteem.
Live and enjoy their ſpite! nor mourn that fate,
Which would, if Virgil liv'd, on Virgil wait;
Whoſe Muſe did once, like thine, in plains delight;
Thine ſhall, like his, ſoon take a higher flight;
So Larks, which firſt from lowly fields ariſe,
Mount by degrees, and reach at laſt the ſkies.

W. WYCHERLEY.

To

To Mr. POPE,

On his WINDSOR FOREST.

HAIL, ſacred Bard! a Muſe unknown before
Salutes thee from the bleak Atlantic ſhore.
To our dark world thy ſhining page is ſhown,
And Windſor's gay retreat becomes our own.
The Eaſtern pomp had juſt beſpoke our care,
And India pour'd her gaudy treaſures here:
A various ſpoil adorn'd our naked land,
The pride of Perſia glitter'd on our ſtrand,
And China's Earth was caſt on common ſand:
Toſs'd up and down the gloſſy fragments lay,
And dreſs'd the rocky ſhelves, and pav'd the painted Bay,
Thy treaſures next arriv'd: and now we boaſt
A nobler cargo on our barren coaſt:
From thy luxuriant Foreſt we receive
More laſting glories than the Eaſt can give.
Where-e'er we dip in thy delightful page,
What pompous ſcenes our buſy thoughts engage!
The pompous ſcenes in all their pride appear,
Freſh in the page, as in the grove they were.
Nor half ſo true the fair Lodona ſhows
The ſylvan ſtate that on her border grows,
While ſhe the wond'ring ſhepherd entertains
With a new Windſor in her wat'ry plains;

Thy

Thy juſter lays the lucid wave ſurpaſs,
The living ſcene is in the Muſe's glaſs.
Nor ſweeter notes the echoing Foreſts chear,
When Philomela ſits and warbles there,
Than when you ſing the greens and op'ning glades,
And give us Harmony as well as Shades:
A Titian's hand might draw the grove, but you
Can paint the grove, and add the Muſic too.
With vaſt variety thy pages ſhine;
A new creation ſtarts in ev'ry line.
How ſudden trees riſe to the reader's ſight,
And make a doubtful ſcene of ſhade and light,
And give at once the day, at once the night!
And here again what ſweet confuſion reigns,
In dreary deſerts mix'd with painted plains!
And ſee! the deſerts caſt a pleaſing gloom,
And ſhrubby heaths rejoice in purple bloom:
Whilſt fruitful crops riſe by their barren ſide,
And bearded groves diſplay their annual pride.
Happy the Man, who ſtrings his tuneful lyre,
Where woods, and brooks, and breathing fields inſpire!
Thrice happy you! and worthy beſt to dwell
Amidſt the rural joys you ſing ſo well.
I in a cold, and in a barren clime,
Cold as my thought, and barren as my rhyme,
Here on the Weſtern beach attempt to chime.
O joyleſs flood! O rough tempeſtuous main,
Border'd with weeds, and ſolitudes obſcene!
Snatch me, ye Gods! from theſe Atlantic ſhores,
And ſhelter me in Windſor's fragrant bow'rs;
Or to my much-lov'd Iſis' walks convey,
And on her flow'ry banks for ever lay.

Thence

Thence let me view the venerable ſcene,
The awful dome, the groves eternal green:
Where ſacred Hough long found his fam'd retreat,
And brought the Muſes to the ſylvan ſeat,
Reform'd the wits, unlock'd the Claſſic ſtore,
And made that Muſic which was noiſe before.
There with illuſtrious Bards I ſpent my days,
Nor free from cenſure, nor unknown to praiſe,
Enjoy'd the bleſſings that his reign beſtow'd,
Nor envy'd Windſor in the ſoft abode.
The golden minutes ſmoothly danc'd away,
And tuneful Bards beguil'd the tedious day:
They ſung, nor ſung in vain, with numbers fir'd
That Maro taught, or Addiſon inſpir'd.
Even I eſſay'd to touch the trembling ſtring:
Who could hear them, and not attempt to ſing?
Rouz'd from theſe dreams by thy commanding ſtrain
I riſe, and wander thro' the field or plain;
Led by thy Muſe from ſport to ſport I run,
Mark the ſtretch'd Line, or hear the thund'ring gun.
Ah! how I melt with pity, when I ſpy
On the cold earth the flutt'ring Pheaſant lie;
His gaudy robes in dazling lines appear,
And ev'ry feather ſhines and varies there.
Nor can I paſs the gen'rous courſer by,
But while the prancing ſteed allures my eye,
He ſtarts, he's gone! and now I ſee him fly
O'er hills and dales, and now I loſe the courſe,
Nor can the rapid ſight purſue the flying horſe.
Oh cou'd thy Virgil from his orb look down,
He'd view a courſer that might match his own!

Fir'd with the ſport, and eager for the chace,
Lodona's murmurs ſtop me in the race.
Who can refuſe Lodona's melting tale?
The ſoft complaint ſhall over time prevail;
The Tale be told, when ſhades forſake her ſhore,
The Nymph be ſung, when ſhe can flow no more.
Nor ſhall thy ſong, old Thames! forbear to ſhine,
At once the ſubject and the ſong divine.
Peace, ſung by thee, ſhall pleaſe ev'n Britons more
Than all their ſhouts for Victory before.
Oh! could Britannia imitate thy ſtream,
The world ſhould tremble at her awful name:
From various ſprings divided waters glide,
In diff'rent colours roll a diff'rent tyde,
Murmur along their crooked banks awhile,
At once they murmur and enrich the Iſle,
A while diſtinct thro' many channels run,
But meet at laſt, and ſweetly flow in one;
There joy to loſe their long-diſtinguiſh'd names,
And make one glorious, and immortal Thames.

FR. KNAPP.

To

To Mr. POPE.

In imitation of a Greek Epigram on HOMER.

WHEN Phœbus, and the nine harmonious maids,
Of old assembled in the Thespian shades;
What theme, they cry'd, what high immortal air,
Befit these harps to sound, and thee to hear?
Reply'd the God; "Your loftiest notes employ,
"To sing young Peleus, and the fall of Troy."
The wond'rous song with rapture they rehearse;
Then ask who wrought that miracle of verse?
He answer'd with a frown; "I now reveal
"A truth, that Envy bids me not conceal:
"Retiring frequent to this Laureat vale,
"I warbled to the Lyre that fav'rite tale,
"Which, unobserv'd, a wand'ring Greek and blind,
"Heard me repeat, and treasur'd in his mind;
"And fir'd with thirst of more than mortal praise,
"From me, the God of Wit, usurp'd the bays.
"But let vain Greece indulge her growing fame,
"Proud with celestial spoils to grace her name;
"Yet when my arts shall triumph in the West,
"And the white Isle with female pow'r is blest;

"Fame,

" Fame, I foreſee, will make repriſals there,
" And the Tranſlator's Palm to me transfer.
" With leſs regret my claim I now decline,
" The World will think his Engliſh Iliad mine."

E. FENTON.

To Mr. POPE.

TO praiſe, and ſtill with juſt reſpect to praiſe
A Bard triumphant in immortal bays,
The Learn'd to ſhow, the Senſible commend,
Yet ſtill preſerve the province of the Friend;
What life, what vigour muſt the lines require?
What Muſic tune them, what Affection fire?
O might thy Genius in my boſom ſhine!
Thou ſhould'ſt not fail of Numbers worthy thine;
The brighteſt Ancients might at once agree
To ſing within my lays, and ſing of thee.
Horace himſelf would own thou doſt excell
In candid arts to play the Critic well.
Ovid himſelf might wiſh to ſing the Dame
Whom Windſor-Foreſt ſees a gliding ſtream:
On ſilver feet, with annual Oſier crown'd,
She runs for ever thro' Poetic ground.

How

How flame the glories of Belinda's Hair,
Made by thy Muſe the envy of the Fair?
Leſs ſhone the treſſes Egypt's Princeſs wore,
Which ſweet Callimachus ſo ſung before.
Here courtly trifles ſet the world at odds;
Belles war with Beaus, and Whims deſcend for Gods.
The new Machines, in names of ridicule,
Mock the grave phrenzy of the Chemic fool.
But know, ye Fair, a point conceal'd with art,
The Sylphes and Gnomes are but a Woman's heart.
The Graces ſtand in Sight; a Satire-train
Peeps o'er their head, and laughs behind the ſcene.
In Fame's fair Temple, o'er the boldeſt wits,
Inſhrin'd on high, the ſacred Virgil ſits:
And ſits in Meaſures ſuch as Virgil's Muſe
To place thee near him, might be fond to chuſe.
How might he tune th'alternate reed with thee,
Perhaps a Strephon thou, a Daphnis he;
While ſome old Damon, o'er the vulgar wiſe,
Thinks he deſerves, and thou deſerv'ſt the Prize.
Rapt with the thought, my fancy ſeeks the plains,
And turns me ſhepherd while I hear the ſtrains.
Indulgent nurſe of ev'ry tender gale,
Parent of flowrets, old Arcadia, hail!
Here in the cool my limbs at eaſe I ſpread,
Here let thy Poplars whiſper o'er my head!
Still ſlide thy waters, ſoft among the trees,
Thy Aſpins quiver in a breathing breeze!
Smile, all ye valleys, in eternal ſpring,
Be huſh'd, ye winds, while Pope and Virgil ſing.
In Engliſh lays, and all ſublimely great,
Thy Homer warms with all his ancient heat;

He

He ſhines in Council, thunders in the Fight,
And flames with ev'ry ſenſe of great delight.
Long has that Poet reign'd, and long unknown,
Like Monarchs ſparkling on a diſtant throne;
In all the Majeſty of Greek retir'd,
Himſelf unknown, his mighty name admir'd;
His language failing, wrapt him round with Night;
Thine, rais'd by thee, recalls the work to light.
So Wealthy Mines, that ages long before
Fed the large realms around with golden Ore,
When choak'd by ſinking banks, no more appear,
And ſhepherds only ſay, The mines were here:
Should ſome rich youth (if nature warm his heart,
And all his projects ſtand inform'd with art)
Here clear the caves, there ope the leading vein;
The mines detected flame with gold again.
How vaſt, how copious, are thy new deſigns!
How ev'ry Muſick varies in thy lines!
Still, as I read, I feel my boſom beat,
And riſe in raptures by another's heat.
Thus in the wood, when ſummer dreſs'd the days,
While Windſor lent us tuneful hours of eaſe,
Our ears the lark, the thruſh, the turtle bleſt,
And Philomela ſweeteſt o'er the reſt:
The ſhades reſound with ſong——O ſoftly tread,
While a whole ſeaſon warbles round my head.
This to my friend—and when a friend inſpires,
My ſilent harp its maſter's hand requires,
Shakes off the duſt, and makes theſe rocks reſound,
For fortune plac'd me in unfertile ground:
Far from the joys that with my ſoul agree,
From wit, from learning——very far from thee.

Here moſs-grown trees expand the ſmalleſt leaf;
Here half an Acre's corn is half a ſheaf;
Here hills with naked heads the tempeſt meet,
Rocks at their ſides, and torrents at their feet;
Or lazy lakes, unconſcious of a flood,
Whoſe dull brown Naiads ever ſleep in mud.
Yet here Content can dwell, and learned Eaſe,
A Friend delight me, and an Author pleaſe;
Ev'n here I ſing, when POPE ſupplies the theme,
Shew my own love, tho' not increaſe his Fame.

T. PARNELL.

To Mr. POPE.

LET vulgar ſouls triumphal arches raiſe,
Or ſpeaking marbles to record their praiſe;
And picture (to the voice of Fame unknown)
The mimic feature on the breathing ſtone;
Mere mortals; ſubject to death's total ſway,
Reptiles of earth, and beings of a day!
'Tis thine, on ev'ry heart to grave thy praiſe,
A monument which worth alone can raiſe:
Sure to ſurvive, when time ſhall whelm in duſt
The arch, the marble, and the mimic buſt:

Nor 'till the volumes of th' expanded ſky
Blaze in one flame, ſhalt thou and Homer die:
Then ſink together in the world's laſt fires,
What heav'n created, and what heav'n inſpires.
If aught on earth, when once this breath is fled,
With human tranſport touch the mighty dead,
Shakeſpear, rejoice! his hand thy page refines;
Now ev'ry ſcene with native brightneſs ſhines;
Juſt to thy fame, he gives thy genuine thought;
So Tully publiſh'd what Lucretius wrote;
Prun'd by his care, thy laurels loftier grow,
And bloom afreſh on thy immortal brow.
Thus when thy draughts, O Raphael! time invades,
And the bold figure from the canvaſs fades,
A rival hand recalls from ev'ry part
Some latent grace, and equals art with art;
Tranſported we ſurvey the dubious ſtrife,
While each fair image ſtarts again to life.
How long, untun'd, had Homer's ſacred lyre
Jarr'd grating diſcord, all extinct his fire?
This you beheld; and taught by heav'n to ſing,
Call'd the loud muſic from the ſounding ſtring.
Now wak'd from ſlumbers of three thouſand years,
Once more Achilles in dread pomp appears,
Tow'rs o'er the field of death; as fierce he turns,
Keen flaſh his arms, and all the Hero burns;
With martial ſtalk, and more than mortal might,
He ſtrides along, and meets the Gods in fight:
Then the pale Titans, chain'd on burning floors,
Start at the din that rends th' infernal ſhores,
Tremble the tow'rs of heav'n, earth rocks her coaſts,
And gloomy Pluto ſhakes with all his ghoſts,

To ev'ry theme reſponds thy various lay ;
Here rolls a torrent, there Meanders play ;
Sonorous as the Storm thy numbers riſe,
Toſs the wild waves, and thunder in the ſkies ;
Or ſofter than a yielding virgin's ſigh,
The gentle breezes breathe away and die.
Thus, like the radiant God who ſheds the day,
You paint the vale, or gild the azure way ;
And while with ev'ry theme the verſe complies,
Sink without groveling, without raſhneſs riſe.

Proceed, great Bard ! awake th' harmonious ſtring,
Be ours all Homer ! ſtill Ulyſſes ſing.
How long[a] that Hero, by unſkilful hands,
Stript of his robes, a Beggar trod our lands ?
Such as he wander'd o'er his native coaſt,
Shrunk by the wand, and all the warrior loſt :
O'er his ſmooth ſkin a bark of wrinkles ſpread ;
Old age diſgrac'd the honours of his head ;
Nor longer in his heavy eye-ball ſhin'd
The glance divine, forth-beaming from the mind.
But you, like Pallas, ev'ry limb infold
With royal robes, and bid him ſhine in gold ;
Touch'd by your hand, his manly frame improves
With grace divine, and like a God he moves.

Ev'n I, the meaneſt of the Muſes'-train ;
Inflam'd by thee, attempt a nobler ſtrain ;
Advent'rous waken the Mæonian lyre,
Tun'd by your hand, and ſing as you inſpire :
So arm'd by great Achilles for the fight,
Patroclus conquer'd in Achilles' right :

[a] Odyſſey, lib. 16.

Like theirs, our friendſhip ! and I boaſt my name
To thine united —— for thy Friendſhip's Fame.
This labour paſt, of heav'nly ſubjects ſing,
While hov'ring angels liſten on the wing,
To hear from earth ſuch heart-felt raptures riſe,
As, when they ſing, ſuſpended hold the ſkies:
Or nobly riſing in fair Virtue's cauſe,
From thy own life tranſcribe th' unerring laws:
Teach a bad world beneath her ſway to bend;
To verſe like thine fierce ſavages attend,
And men more fierce: when Orpheus tunes the lay,
Ev'n fiends relenting hear their rage away.

W. BROOME.

To Mr. POPE, on the publiſhing his Works.

HE comes, he comes! bid ev'ry bard prepare
The ſong of triumph, and attend his Car.
Great Sheffield's Muſe the long proceſſion heads,
And throws a luſtre o'er the pomp ſhe leads,
Firſt gives the palm ſhe fir'd him to obtain,
Crowns his gay brow, and ſhows him how to reign.
Thus young Alcides, by old Chiron taught,
Was form'd for all the miracles he wrought:
Thus Chiron did the youth he taught applaud,
Pleas'd to behold the earneſt of a God.

But hark what ſhouts, what gath'ring crouds rejoice!
Unſtain'd their praiſe by any venal voice,
Such as th' Ambitious vainly think their due,
When Proſtitutes, or needy Flatt'rers ſue.
And ſee the Chief! before him laurels born;
Trophies from undeſerving temples torn;
Here Rage enchain'd reluctant raves, and there
Pale Envy dumb, and ſick'ning with deſpair;
Prone to the earth ſhe bends her loathing eye,
Weak to ſupport the blaze of majeſty.
But what are they that turn the ſacred page?
Three lovely Virgins, and of equal age;
Intent they read, and all enamour'd ſeem,
As he that met his Likeneſs in the ſtream:
The GRACES theſe; and ſee how they contend,
Who moſt ſhall praiſe, who beſt ſhall recommend.
The Chariot now the painful ſteep aſcends,
The Pæans ceaſe; thy glorious labour ends.
Here fix'd, the bright eternal Temple ſtands,
Its proſpect an unbounded view commands:
Say, wond'rous youth, what Column wilt thou chuſe,
What laurell'd Arch for thy triumphant Muſe?
Tho' each great Ancient court thee to his ſhrine,
Tho' ev'ry Laurel thro' the dome be thine,
(From the proud Epic, down to thoſe that ſhade
The gentler brow of the ſoft Leſbian maid)
Go to the Good and Juſt, an awful train,
Thy ſoul's delight, and glory of the Fane:
While thro' the earth thy dear remembrance flies,
"Sweet to the world, and grateful to the ſkies."

SIMON HARCOURT.

TO

To Mr. POPE.

From Rome, 1730.

IMmortal Bard! for whom each Muſe has wove
The faireſt garlands of th' Aonian Grove;
Preſerv'd, our drooping Genius to reſtore,
When Addiſon and Congreve are no more;
After ſo many ſtars extinct in night,
The darken'd Age's laſt remaining light!
To thee from Latian realms this verſe is writ,
Inſpir'd by memory of antient Wit;
For now no more theſe climes their influence boaſt,
Fall'n is their Glory, and their Virtue loſt;
From Tyrants, and from Prieſts, the Muſes fly,
Daughters of Reaſon and of Liberty.
Nor Baiæ now, nor Umbria's plain they love,
Nor on the banks of Nar, or Mincio rove;
To Thames's flow'ry borders they retire,
And kindle in thy breaſt the Roman fire.
So in the ſhades, where chear'd with ſummer rays
Melodious linnets warbled ſprightly lays,
Soon as the faded, falling leaves complain
Of gloomy winter's unauſpicious reign,
No tuneful voice is heard of joy or love,
But mournful ſilence ſaddens all the grove.

Unhappy Italy! whoſe alter'd ſtate
Has felt the worſt ſeverity of Fate:
Not that Barbarian hands her Faſces broke,
And bow'd her haughty neck beneath their yoke;
Not that her palaces to earth are thrown,
Her cities deſart, and her fields unſown;
But that her ancient Spirit is decay'd,
That ſacred Wiſdom from her bounds is fled,
That there the ſource of Science flows no more,
Whence its rich ſtreams ſupply'd the world before.
Illuſtrious Names! that once in Latium ſhin'd,
Born to inſtruct, and to command Mankind;
Chiefs, by whoſe Virtue mighty Rome was rais'd,
And Poets, who thoſe chiefs ſublimely prais'd!
Oft I the traces you have left explore,
Your aſhes viſit, and your urns adore;
Oft kiſs, with lips devout, ſome mouldring ſtone,
With ivy's venerable ſhade o'ergrown;
Thoſe hallow'd ruins better pleas'd to ſee
Than all the Pomp of modern Luxury.
As late on Virgil's tomb freſh flow'rs I ſtrow'd,
While with th' inſpiring Muſe my boſom glow'd,
Crown'd with eternal bays my raviſh'd eyes
Beheld the Poet's awful Form ariſe:
Stranger, he ſaid, whoſe pious hand has paid
Theſe grateful rites to my attentive ſhade,
When thou ſhalt breathe thy happy native air,
To Pope this meſſage from his maſter bear:
Great Bard, whoſe numbers I my ſelf inſpire,
To whom I gave my own harmonious lyre,
If high exalted on the Throne of Wit,
Near Me and Homer thou aſpire to ſit,

No more let meaner Satire dim the rays
That flow majeſtic from thy nobler bays;
In all the flow'ry paths of Pindus ſtray,
But ſhun that thorny, that unpleaſing way;
Nor, when each ſoft engaging Muſe is thine,
Addreſs the leaſt attractive of the Nine.

Of thee more worthy were the taſk, to raiſe
A laſting Column to thy Country's Praiſe,
To ſing the Land, which yet alone can boaſt
That Liberty corrupted Rome has loſt,
Where Science in the arms of Peace is laid,
And plants her Palm beneath the Olive's ſhade.
Such was the Theme for which my lyre I ſtrung,
Such was the People whoſe exploits I ſung;
Brave, yet refin'd, for Arms and Arts renown'd,
With diff'rent bays by Mars and Phæbus crown'd,
Dauntleſs oppoſers of Tyrannic Sway,
But pleas'd, a mild AUGUSTUS to obey.

If theſe commands ſubmiſſive thou receive,
Immortal and unblam'd thy Name ſhall live;
Envy to black Cocytus ſhall retire,
And howl with Furies in tormenting fire;
Approving Time ſhall conſecrate thy Lays,
And join the Patriot's to the Poet's Praiſe.

DISCOURSE

PASTORAL POETRY.[a]

THERE are not, I believe, a greater number of any ſort of verſes, than of thoſe which are called Paſtorals; nor a ſmaller, than of thoſe which are truly ſo. It therefore ſeems neceſſary to give ſome account of this kind of Poem, and it is my deſign to comprize in this ſhort paper the ſubſtance of thoſe numerous diſſertations the Criticks have made on the ſubject, without omitting any of their rules in my own favour. You will alſo find ſome points reconciled, about which they ſeem to differ, and a few remarks, which, I think, have eſcaped their obſervation.

The original of Poetry is aſcribed to that Age which ſucceeded the creation of the world: and as the keeping of flocks ſeems to have been the firſt employment of mankind, the moſt ancient ſort of poetry was probably paſtoral [b]. It is natural to imagine, that the leiſure of thoſe ancient ſhepherds admitting and inviting ſome diverſion, none was ſo proper to that ſolitary and ſedentary life as ſinging; and that in their ſongs they took occaſion to celebrate their own felicity.

[a] Written at ſixteen years of age. P.
[b] Fontenelle's Diſc. on Paſtorals. P.

From hence a Poem was invented, and afterwards improved to a perfect image of that happy time; which by giving us an esteem for the virtues of a former age, might recommend them to the present. And since the life of shepherds was attended with more tranquillity than any other rural employment, the Poets chose to introduce their Persons, from whom it received the name of Pastoral.

A Pastoral is an imitation of the action of a shepherd, or one considered under that character. The form of this imitation is dramatic, or narrative, or mixed of both [c]; the fable simple, the manners not too polite nor too rustic: the thoughts are plain, yet admit a little quickness and passion, but that short and flowing: the expression humble, yet as pure as the language will afford; neat, but not florid; easy, and yet lively. In short, the fable, manners, thoughts, and expressions are full of the greatest simplicity in nature.

The complete character of this poem consists in simplicity [d], brevity, and delicacy; the two first of which render an eclogue natural, and the last delightful.

If we would copy Nature, it may be useful to take this Idea along with us, that Pastoral is an image of what they call the golden age. So that we are not to describe our shepherds as shepherds at this day really are, but as they may be conceived then to have been; when the best of men followed the employment. To carry this resemblance yet farther, it would not be amiss to give these shepherds some skill in astronomy, as far as it may be useful to that sort of life. And an air of piety to the Gods should shine through the Poem, which so visibly appears in all the works of antiquity: and it ought to preserve some relish of the old way of writing; the connection should be loose, the narrations and descriptions short [e], and the periods concise. Yet it is not sufficient, that the sentences only be brief, the whole Eclogue ſhould be ſo too. For we cannot ſuppoſe Poetry in thoſe days to have been the buſineſs of men, but their recreation at vacant hours.

But with a reſpect to the preſent age, nothing more conduces to make theſe compoſures natural, than when ſome Knowledge in rural affairs is diſcovered [f]. This may be made to appear rather done by chance than on deſign, and ſometimes is beſt ſhewn by inference; leſt by too much ſtudy to ſeem natural, we deſtroy that eaſy ſimplicity from whence ariſes the delight. For what is inviting in this ſort of poetry proceeds not ſo much from the Idea of that buſineſs, as of the tranquillity of a country life.

We muſt therefore uſe ſome illuſion to render a Paſtoral delightful; and this conſiſts in expoſing the beſt ſide only of a ſhepherd's life, and in concealing its miſeries. [g] Nor is it enough to introduce ſhepherds diſcourſing together in a natural way; but a regard muſt be had to the ſubject; that it contain ſome particular beauty in itſelf, and that it be different in every Eclogue. Beſides, in each of them a deſigned ſcene or proſpect is to be preſented to our view, which ſhould likewiſe have its variety [h]. This variety is obtained in a great degree by frequent compariſons, drawn from the moſt agreeable objects of the country; by interrogations to things inanimate; by beautiful digreſſions, but thoſe ſhort; ſome times by inſiſting a little on circumſtances; and laſtly, by elegant turns on the words, which render the numbers extremely ſweet and pleaſing. As for the numbers themſelves, though they are properly of the heroic meaſure, they ſhould be the ſmoothest, the moſt eaſy and flowing imaginable.

It is by rules like theſe that we ought to judge of Paſtoral. And ſince the inſtructions given for any art are to be delivered as that art is in perfection, they muſt of neceſſity be derived from thoſe in whom it is acknowledged ſo to be. It is therefore from the practice of Theocritus and Virgil, (the only undiſputed authors of Paſtoral) that the Criticks have drawn the foregoing notions concerning it.

Theocritus excels all others in Nature and ſimplicity. The ſubjects of his Idyllia are purely paſtoral; but he is not ſo exact in his perſons, having introduced reapers [i] and fiſhermen as well as ſhepherds. He is apt to be too long in his deſcriptions, of which that of the Cup in the firſt paſtoral is a remarkable inſtance. In the manners he ſeems a little defective, for his ſwains are ſometimes abuſive and immodeſt, and perhaps too much inclining to ruſticity; for inſtance, in his fourth and fifth Idyllia. But 'tis enough that all others learnt their excellencies from him, and that his Dialect alone has a ſecret charm in it, which no other could ever attain.

Virgil, who copies Theocritus, refines upon his original: and in all points where judgment is principally concerned, he is much ſuperior to his maſter. Though ſome of his ſubjects are not paſtoral in themſelves, but only ſeem to be ſuch; they have a wonderful variety in them, which the Greek was a ſtranger to [k]. He exceeds him in regularity and brevity, and falls ſhort of him in nothing but ſimplicity and propriety of ſtyle; the firſt of which perhaps was the fault of his age, and the laſt of his language.

Among the moderns, their ſucceſs has been greateſt who have moſt endeavoured to make theſe ancients their pattern. The moſt conſiderable Genius appears in the famous Taſſo, and our Spenſer. Taſſo in his Aminta has as far excelled all the Paſtoral wri ers, as in his Gieruſalemme he has out-done the Epic Poets of his country. But as this Piece ſeems to have been the original of a new ſort of poem, the paſtoral Comedy, in Italy, it cannot ſo well be conſidered as a copy of the ancients. Spenſer's Calendar, in Mr. Dryden's opinion, is the moſt complete work of this kind which any Nation has produced ever since the time of Virgil.[1] Not but that he may be thought imperfect in some few points. His Eclogues are somewhat too long, if we compare them with the ancients. He is sometimes too allegorical, and treats of matters of religion in a pastoral style, as the Mantuan had done before him. He has employed the Lyric measure, which is contrary to the practice of the old Poets. His Stanza is not still the same, nor always well chosen. This last may be the reason his expression is sometimes not concise enough: for the Tetrastic has obliged him to extend his sense to the length of four lines, which would have been more closely confined in the Couplet.

In the manners, thoughts, and characters, he comes near to Theocritus himself; tho', notwithstanding all the care he has taken, he is certainly inferior in his Dialect: For the Doric had its beauty and propriety in the time of Theocritus; it was used in part of Greece, and frequent in the mouths of many of the greatest persons: whereas the old English and country phrases of Spenser were either entirely obsolete, or spoken only by people of the lowest condition. As there is a difference betwixt simplicity and rusticity, so the expression of simple thoughts should be plain, but not clownish. The addition he has made of a Calendar to his Eclogues, is very beautiful; since by this, besides the general moral of innocence and simplicity, which is common to other authors of Pastoral, he has one peculiar to himself; he compares human Life to the several Seasons, and at once exposes to his readers a view of the great and little worlds, in their various changes and aspects. Yet the scrupulous division of his Pastorals into months, has obliged him either to repeat the same description, in other words, for three Months together; or, when it was exhausted before, entirely to omit it: whence it comes to pass, that some of his Eclogues (as the sixth, eighth, and tenth for example) have nothing but their Titles to diſtinguiſh them. The reaſon is evident, becauſe the year has not that variety in it to furniſh every month with a particular deſcription, as it may every ſeaſon.

Of the following Eclogues I ſhall only ſay, that theſe four comprehend all the ſubjects which the Criticks upon Theocritus and Virgil will allow to be fit for paſtoral: That they have as much variety of deſcription, in reſpect of the ſeveral ſeaſons, as Spenſer's: that in order to add to this variety, the ſeveral times of the day are obſerv'd, the rural employments in each ſeaſon or time of day, and the rural ſcenes or places proper to ſuch employments; not without ſome regard to the ſeveral ages of man, and the different paſſions proper to each age.

But after all, if they have any merit, it is to be attributed to ſome good old Authors, whoſe works as I had leiſure to ſtudy, ſo I hope I have not wanted care to imitate.

SPRING.

THE

FIRST PASTORAL,

OR

DAMON.

To Sir WILLIAM TRUMBAL.

FIRST in theſe fields I try the ſylvan ſtrains,
Nor bluſh to ſport on Windſor's bliſsful plains:
Fair Thames, flow gently from thy ſacred ſpring,
While on thy banks Sicilian Muſes ſing;

REMARKS.

Theſe Paſtorals were written at the age of ſixteen, and then paſt thro' the hands of Mr. Walſh, Mr. Wycherley, G. Granville afterwards Lord Landſdown, Sir William Trumbal, Dr. Garth, Lord Hallifax, Lord Somers, Mr. Mainwaring, and others. All theſe gave our Author the greateſt encouragement, and particularly Mr. Walſh (whom Mr. Dryden, in his Poſtſcript to Virgil, calls the beſt critic of his age.) "The Author "(ſays he) ſeems to have a particular genius for "this kind of Poetry, and a judgment that much "exceeds his years. He has taken very freely from "the Ancients. But what he has mixed of his own "with theirs is no way inferior to what he has taken "from them. It is not flattery at all to ſay that Virgil "had written nothing ſo good at his Age. His "Preface is very judicious and Learned." Letter to

Let vernal airs thro' trembling oſiers play,
And Albion's cliffs reſound the rural lay.
You, that too wiſe for pride, too good for pow'r,
Enjoy the glory to be great no more,
And carrying with you all the world can boaſt,
To all the world illuſtriouſly are loſt!

Remarks.

Mr. Wycherley, Ap. 1705. The Lord Lanſdown about the ſame time, mentioning the youth of our Poet, ſays (in a printed Letter of the Character of Mr. Wycherley) "that if he goes on as he has begun in the "Paſtoral way, as Virgil firſt tried his ſtrength, we "may hope to ſee Engliſh Poetry vie with the Ro-"man," etc. Nothwithſtanding the early time of their production, the Author eſteemed theſe as the moſt correct in the verſification, and muſical in the numbers, of all his works. The reaſon for his labouring them into ſo much ſoftneſs, was, doubtleſs, that this ſort of poetry derives almoſt its whole beauty from a natural eaſe of thought and ſmoothneſs of verſe; whereas that of moſt other kinds conſiſts in the ſtrength and fulneſs of both. In a Letter of his to Mr. Walſh about this time we find an enumeration of ſeveral Niceties in Verſification, which perhaps have never been ſtrictly obſerved in any Engliſh poem, except in theſe Paſtorals. They were not Printed till 1709. P.

Sir William Trumbal] Our Author's friendſhip with this gentleman commenced at very unequal years; he was under ſixteen, but Sir William above ſixty, and had lately reſign'd his employment of Secretary of State to King William. P.

Imitations.

Ver. 1. Prima Syracoſio dignata eſt ludere verſu,

This is the general Exordium and opening of the Paſtorals, in imitation of the 6th of Virgil, which ſome

O let my Muſe her ſlender reed inſpire,
Till in your native ſhades you tune the lyre:
So when the Nightingale to reſt removes,
The Thruſh may chant to the forſaken groves,
But, charm'd to ſilence, liſtens while ſhe ſings,
And all th' aërial audience clap their wings.

Soon as the flocks ſhook off the nightly dews,
Two Swains, whom Love kept wakeful, and the Muſe,
Pour'd o'er the whitening vale their fleecy care,
Freſh as the morn, and as the ſeaſon fair:

Remarks.

Ver. 12. In your native ſhades.] Sir W. Trumbal was born in Windſor-Foreſt, to which he retreated, after he had reſign'd the poſt of Secretary of State to King William III. P.

Ver. 17, etc. The Scene of this Paſtoral a Valley, the Time the Morning. It ſtood originally thus.

Daphnis and Strephon to the ſhades retir'd,
Both warm'd by Love, and by the Muſe inſpir'd,
Freſh as the morn, and as the ſeaſon fair,
In flow'ry vales they fed their fleecy care;
And while Aurora gilds the mountain's ſide,
Thus Daphnis ſpoke, and Strephon thus reply'd.

have therefore not improbably thought to have been the firſt originally. In the beginnings of the other three Paſtorals, he imitates expreſly thoſe which now ſtand firſt of the three chief Poets in this kind, Spenſer, Virgil, Theocritus.

Beneath the ſhade a ſpreading Beach diſplays, ——

—Tityre, tu patulæ recùbans ſub tegmine fagi
—Ἀδύ τι τὸ ψιθύρισμα καὶ ἁ πίτυς, αἰπόλε, τήνα.

The dawn now bluſhing on the mountain's ſide,
Thus Daphnis ſpoke, and Strephon thus reply'd.

DAPHNIS.

Hear how the birds, on ev'ry bloomy ſpray,
With joyous muſick wake the dawning day!
Why ſit we mute when early linnets ſing,
When warbling Philomel ſalutes the ſpring?
Why ſit we ſad when Phoſphor ſhines ſo clear,
And laviſh nature paints the purple Year?

STREPHON.

Sing then, and Damon ſhall attend the ſtrain,
While yon' ſlow oxen turn the furrow'd Plain.
Here the bright crocus and blue vi'let glow;
Here weſtern winds on breathing roſes blow.
I'll ſtake yon' lamb, that near the fountain plays,
And from the brink his dancing ſhade ſurveys.

DAPHNIS.

And I this bowl, where wanton Ivy twines,
And ſwelling cluſters bend the curling vines:

VARIATIONS.

VER. 36. And cluſters lurk beneath the curling vines. P.

REMARKS.

VER. 28. purple year?] Purple here uſed in the Latin ſenſe, of the brighteſt, moſt vivid colouring in general, not of that peculiar tint ſo called.

VER. 34. The firſt reading was,
And his own image from the bank ſurveys.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 35, 36,
Lenta quibus torno facili ſuperaddita vitis,
Diffuſos hedera veſtit pallente corymbos. Virg. P.

Four figures rising from the work appear,
The various seasons of the rowling year;
And what is that, which binds the radiant sky,
Where twelve fair Signs in beauteous order lie?

DAMON.

Then sing by turns, by turns the Muses sing,
Now hawthorns blossom, now the daisies spring,
Now leaves the trees, and flow'rs adorn the ground,
Begin, the vales shall ev'ry note rebound.

STREPHON.

Inspire me, Phœbus, in my Delia's praise
With Waller's strains, or Granville's moving lays!

REMARKS.

VER. 46. Granville—] George Granville, afterwards Lord Landsdown, known for his Poems, most of which he compos'd very young, and propos'd Waller as his model. P.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 38. The various Seasons.] The Subject of these Pastorals engraven on the bowl is not without its propriety. The Shepherd's hesitation at the name of the Zodiac, imitates that in Virgil.

Et quis fuit alter,
Descripsit radio totum qui gentibus orbem? P.

VER. 41. Then sing by turns.] Literally from Virgil,
Alternis dicetis, amant alterna Camænæ:
Et nunc omnis ager, nunc omnis parturit arbos,
Nunc frondent sylvæ, nunc formosissimus annus. P.

A milk-white bull ſhall at your altars ſtand,
That threats a fight, and ſpurns the riſing ſand.

DAPHNIS.

O Love! for Sylvia let me gain the prize,
And make my tongue victorious as her eyes;
No lambs or ſheep for victims I'll impart,
Thy victim, Love, ſhall be the ſhepherds heart.

STREPHON.

Me gentle Delia beckons from the plain,
Then hid in ſhades, eludes her eager ſwain;
But feigns a laugh, to ſee me ſearch around,
And by that laugh the willing fair is found.

DAPHNIS.

The ſprightly Sylvia trips along the green,
She runs, but hopes ſhe does not run unſeen;
While a kind glance at her purſuer flies,
How much at variance are her feet and eyes!

VARIATIONS.

VER. 49. Originally thus in the MS.
Pan, let my numbers equal Strephon's lays,
Of Parian ſtone thy ſtatue will I raiſe;
But if I conquer and augment my fold,
Thy Parian ſtatue ſhall be chang'd to Gold.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 47. A milk-white Bull.] Virg--Paſcite taurum,

VER. 58, She runs, but hopes.] Imitation of Virgil,
Malo me Galatea petit, laſciva puella,
Et fugit ad ſalices, ſed ſe cupit ante videri. P.

STREPHON.

O'er golden ſands let rich Pactolus flow,
And trees weep amber on the banks of Po;
Bleſt Thames's ſhores the brighteſt beauties yield,
Feed here my lambs, I'll ſeek no diſtant field.

DAPHNIS.

Celeſtial Venus haunts Idalia's groves;
Diana Cynthus, Ceres Hybla loves;
If Windſor-ſhades delight the matchleſs maid,
Cynthus and Hybla yield to Windſor-ſhade.

STREPHON.

All nature mourns, the Skies relent in ſhowr's,
Huſh'd are the birds, and clos'd the drooping flow'rs;

VARIATIONS.

VER. 61. It ſtood thus at firſt,
Let rich Iberia golden fleeces boaſt,
Her purple wool the proud Aſſyrian Coaſt,
Bleſt Thames's ſhores, etc. P.

VER. 61. Originally thus in the MS.
Go, flow'ry wreath, and let my Silvia know,
Compar'd to thine how bright her Beauties ſhow;
Then die; and dying teach the lovely Maid
How ſoon the brighteſt beauties are decay'd.

DAPHNIS.

Go, tuneful bird, that pleas'd the woods ſo long,
Of Amaryllis learn a ſweeter ſong;
To Heav'n ariſing then her notes convey,
For Heav'n alone is worthy ſuch a lay.

If Delia ſmile, the flow'rs begin to ſpring,
The ſkies to brighten, and the birds to ſing.

DAPHNIS.

All nature laughs, the groves are freſh and fair,
The Sun's mild luſtre warms the vital air;
If Sylvia ſmiles, new glories gild the ſhore,
And vanquiſh'd nature ſeems to charm no more.

STREPHON.

In ſpring the fields, in autumn hills I love,
At morn the plains, at noon the ſhady grove,
But Delia always; abſent from her ſight,
Nor plains at morn, nor groves at noon delight.

DAPHNIS.

Sylvia's like autumn ripe, yet mild as May,
More bright than noon, yet freſh as early day;
Ev'n ſpring diſpleaſes, when ſhe ſhines not here;
But bleſt with her, 'tis ſpring throughout the year.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 69. etc. Theſe verſes were thus at firſt:
All nature mourns, the birds their ſongs deny,
Nor waſted brooks the thirſty flow'rs ſupply;
If Delia ſmile, the flow'rs begin to ſpring,
The brooks to murmur, and the birds to ſing. P.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 69. All nature mourns,]
Virg. Aret ager, vitio moriens ſitit aeris herba, &c.
Phyllidis adventu noſtræ nemus omne virebit. P.

STREPHON.

Say, Daphnis, say, in what glad soil appears,
A wond'rous Tree that sacred Monarchs bears:
Tell me but this, and I'll disclaim the prize,
And give the conquest to thy Sylvia's eyes.

DAPHNIS.

Nay tell me first, in what more happy fields
The Thistle springs, to which the Lilly yields:
And then a nobler prize I will resign;
For Sylvia, charming Sylvia, shall be thine.

DAMON.

Cease to contend, for, Daphnis, I decree,
The bowl to Strephon, and the lamb to thee:
Blest Swains, whose Nymphs in ev'ry grace excel;
Blest Nymphs, whose Swains those graces sing so well!

REMARKS.

VER. 86. A wond'rous Tree that sacred Monarchs bears.] An allusion to the Royal Oak, in which Charles II. had been hid from the pursuit after the battle of Worcester. P.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 90. The Thistle springs, to which the Lilly yields,] alludes to the Device of the Scots Monarchs, the Thistle, worn by Queen Anne; and to the Arms of France, the Fleur de Lys. The two riddles are in imitation of those in Virg. Ecl. iii.

Dic quibus in terris inscripti nomina Regum
Nascantur Flores, & Phillida solus habeto. P.

Now riſe, and haſte to yonder woodbine bow'rs,
A ſoft retreat from ſudden vernal ſhow'rs,
The turf with rural dainties ſhall be crown'd,
While op'ning blooms diffuſe their ſweets around.
For ſee! the gath'ring flocks to ſhelter tend,
And from the Pleiads fruitful ſhow'rs deſcend.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 99. was originally,
The turf with country dainties ſhall be ſpread,
And trees with twining branches ſhade your head. P.

SUMMER.

SECOND PASTORAL,

OR

ALEXIS.

To Dr. GARTH.

A Shepherd's Boy (he seeks no better name)
Led forth his flocks along the silver Thame,
Where dancing sun-beams on the waters play'd,
And verdant alders form'd a quiv'ring shade.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 1, 2, 3, 4, were thus printed in the first edition:

A faithful swain, whom Love had taught to sing,
Bewail'd his fate beside a silver spring;
Where gentle Thames his winding waters leads Thro' verdant forests, and thro' flow'ry meads. P.

VER. 3. Originally thus in the MS.

There to the winds he plain'd his hapless love,
And Amaryllis fill'd the vocal grove.

REMARKS.

VER. 3. The Scene of this Pastoral by the river's side; suitable to the heat of the season; the time noon. P.

Soft as he mourn'd, the ſtreams forgot to flow,
The flocks around a dumb compaſſion ſhow,
The Naiads wept in ev'ry wat'ry bow'r,
And Jove conſented in a ſilent ſhow'r.

Accept, O GARTH, the Muſe's early lays,
That adds this wreath of Ivy to thy Bays;
Hear what from Love unpractis'd hearts endure,
From Love, the ſole diſeaſe thou canſt not cure.

Ye ſhady beeches, and ye cooling ſtreams,
Defence from Phœbus', not from Cupid's beams,
To you I mourn, nor to the deaf I ſing,
The woods ſhall anſwer, and their echo ring.
The hills and rocks attend my doleful lay,
Why art thou prouder and more hard than they?
The bleating ſheep with my complaints agree,
They parch'd with heat, and I inflam'd by thee.
The ſultry Sirius burns the thirſty plains,
While in thy heart eternal winter reigns.

REMARKS.

VER. 9.] Dr. Samuel Garth, Author of the Diſpenſary, was one of the firſt friends of the Author, whoſe acquaintance with him began at fourteen or fifteen. Their friendſhip continued from the year 1703 to 1718, which was that of his death. P.

Where ſtray ye Muſes, in what lawn or grove,
While your Alexis pines in hopeleſs love?
In thoſe fair fields where ſacred Iſis glides,
Or elſe where Cam his winding vales divides?
As in the cryſtal ſpring I view my face,
Freſh riſing bluſhes paint the wat'ry glaſs;
But ſince thoſe graces pleaſe thy eyes no more,
I ſhun the fountains which I ſought before.
Once I was skill'd in ev'ry herb that grew,
And ev'ry plant that drinks the morning dew;
Ah wretched ſhepherd, what avails thy art,
To cure thy lambs, but not to heal thy heart!
Let other ſwains attend the rural care,
Feed fairer flocks, or richer fleeces ſheer:

VARIATIONS.

VER. 27.
Oft in the cryſtal ſpring I caſt a view,
And equal'd Hylas, if the glaſs be true;

Judice te, metuam, ſi nunquam fallat imago. P.

But nigh yon' mountain let me tune my lays,
Embrace my Love, and bind my brows with bays.
That flute is mine which Colin's tuneful breath
Inſpir'd when living, and bequeath'd in death;
He ſaid; Alexis, take this pipe, the ſame
That taught the groves my Roſalinda's name:
But now the reeds ſhall hang on yonder tree,
For ever ſilent, ſince deſpis'd by thee.
Oh! were I made by ſome transforming pow'r
The captive bird that ſings within thy bow'r!
Then might my voice thy liſt'ning ears employ,
And I thoſe kiſſes he receives, enjoy.
And yet my numbers pleaſe the rural throng,
Rough Satyrs dance, and Pan applauds the ſong:
The Nymphs, forſaking ev'ry cave and ſpring,
Their early fruit, and milk-white turtles bring;
Each am'rous nymph prefers her gifts in vain,
On you their gifts are all beſtow'd again.
For you the ſwains the faireſt flow'rs deſign,
And in one garland all their beauties join;
Accept the wreath which you deſerve alone,
In whom all beauties are compriz'd in one.

REMARKS.

VER. 39. Colin.] The name taken by Spenſer in his Eclogues, where his miſtreſs is celebrated under that of Roſalinda. P.

IMITATIONS.

See what delights in sylvan scenes appear!
Descending Gods have found Elysium here.
In woods bright Venus with Adonis stray'd,
And chaste Diana haunts the forest-shade.
Come, lovely nymph, and bless the silent hours,
When swains from sheering seek their nightly bow'rs;
When weary reapers quit the sultry field,
And crown'd with corn their thanks to Ceres yield,
This harmless grove no lurking viper hides,
But in my breast the serpent Love abides.
Here bees from blossoms sip the rosy dew,
But your Alexis knows no sweets but you.
Oh deign to visit our forsaken seats,
The mossy fountains, and the green retreats!
Where'er you walk, cool gales shall fan the glade,
Trees, where you sit, shall croud into a shade;
Where-e'er you tread, the blushing flow'rs shall rise,
And all things flourish where you turn your eyes.
Oh! how I long with you to pass my days,
Invoke the Muses, and resound your praise!
Your praise the birds shall chant in ev'ry grove,
And winds shall waft it to the pow'rs above.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 79, 80.

Your praise the tuneful birds to heav'n shall bear,
And list'ning wolves grow milder as they hear.

So the verses were originally written. But the author, young as he was, soon found the absurdity which Spenser himself over-looked, of introducing Wolves into England. P.

The wond'ring foreſts ſoon ſhould dance again,
The moving mountains hear the pow'rful call,
And headlong ſtreams hang liſt'ning in their fall.
But ſee, the ſhepherds ſhun the noon-day heat,
The lowing herds to murm'ring brooks retreat,
To cloſer ſhades the panting flocks remove;
Ye Gods! and is there no relief for Love?
But ſoon the ſun with milder rays deſcends
To the cool ocean, where his journey ends:
On me love's fiercer flames for ever prey,
By night he ſcorches, as he burns by day.

THIRD PASTORAL.

OR

HYLAS and ÆGON.

To Mr. WYCHERLEY.

BEneath the ſhade a ſpreading Beech diſplays,
Hylas and Ægon ſung their rural lays,
This mourn'd a faithleſs, that an abſent Love,
And Delia's name and Doris fill'd the Grove.
Ye Mantuan nymphs, your ſacred ſuccour bring;
Hylas and Ægon's rural lays I ſing.
Thou, whom the Nine with Plautus' wit inſpire,
The art of Terence, and Menander's fire;

REMARKS.

This Paſtoral conſiſts of two parts, like the viiith of Virgil: The Scene, a Hill; the Time, at Sun-ſet. P.

VER. 7. Thou, whom the Nine,] Mr. Wycherley, a famous Author of Comedies; of which the moſt celebrated were the Plain-Dealer and Country-Wife. He was a writer of infinite ſpirit, ſatire, and wit. The only objection made to him was that he had too much. However he was followed in the ſame way by Mr. Congreve; tho' with a little more correctneſs. P.

VER. 8. The Art of Terence and Menander's fire;] This line evidently alludes to that famous Character given of Terence, by Cæſar,

Tu quoque, tu in ſummis, ô dimidiate Menander,

Whoſe ſenſe inſtructs us, and whoſe humour charms,
Whoſe judgment ſways us, and whoſe ſpirit warms!
Oh, ſkill'd in Nature! ſee the hearts of Swains,
Their artleſs paſſions, and their tender pains.

Now ſetting Phœbus ſhone ſerenely bright,
And fleecy clouds were ſtreak'd with purple light;
When tuneful Hylas with melodious moan,
Taught rocks to weep, and made the mountains groan.

Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs away!
To Delia's ear, the tender notes convey.
As ſome ſad Turtle his loſt love deplores,
And with deep murmurs fills the ſounding ſhores;
Thus, far from Delia, to the winds I mourn,
Alike unheard, unpity'd, and forlorn.

Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs along!
For her, the feather'd quires neglect their ſong;
For her, the lymes their pleaſing ſhades deny;
For her, the lillies hang their heads and die.

REMARKS.

Poneris, et merito, puri ſermonis amator;
Lenibus atque utinam ſcriptis adjuncta foret vis Comica.

So that the judicious critic ſees he ſhould have ſaid—with Menander's fire. For what the Poet meant, in this line, was, that his Friend had joined to Terence's art what Cæſar thought wanting in Terence, namely the vis comica of Menander. Beſides,—and Menander's fire is making that the Characteriſtic of Menander which was not. His character was the having art and comic ſpirit in perfect conjunction, of which Terence having only the firſt, he is called the half of Menander.

VER. 9. Whoſe ſenſe inſtructs us] He was always very carefull in his encomiums not to fall into ridicule, the trap which weak and proſtitute flatterers rarely eſcape. For ſenſe, he would willingly have ſaid, moral; propriety required it. But this dramatic poet's moral was remarkably faulty. His plays are all monſtrouſly immoral both in the Dialogue and Action.

Ye flow'rs that droop, forſaken by the ſpring,
Ye birds that, left by ſummer, ceaſe to ſing,
Ye trees that fade when autumn-heats remove,
Say, is not abſence death to thoſe who love?
Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs away!
Curs'd be the fields that cauſe my Delia's ſtay;
Fade ev'ry bloſſom, wither ev'ry tree,
Die ev'ry flow'r, and periſh all, but ſhe.
What have I ſaid? where'er my Delia flies,
Let ſpring attend, and ſudden flow'rs ariſe;
Let op'ning roſes knotted oaks adorn,
And liquid amber drop from ev'ry thorn.
Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs along!
The birds ſhall ceaſe to tune their ev'ning ſong,
The winds to breathe, the waving woods to move,
And ſtreams to murmur, e'er I ceaſe to love.
Not bubling fountains to the thirſty ſwain,
Not balmy ſleep to lab'rers faint with pain,
Not ſhow'rs to larks, or ſun-ſhine to the bee,
Are half ſo charming as thy ſight to me.
Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs away!
Come, Delia, come; ah, why this long delay?

Thro' rocks and caves the name of Delia ſounds,
Delia, each cave and echoing rock rebounds.
Ye pow'rs, what pleaſing frenzy ſooths my mind!
Do lovers dream, or is my Delia kind?
She comes, my Delia comes!—Now ceaſe my lay,
And ceaſe, ye gales, to bear my ſighs away!
Next Ægon ſung, while Windſor groves admir'd;
Rehearſe, ye Muſes, what yourſelves inſpir'd.
Reſound, ye hills, reſound my mournful ſtrain!
Of perjur'd Doris, dying I complain:
Here where the mountains leſs'ning as they riſe
Loſe the low vales, and ſteal into the ſkies:
While lab'ring oxen, ſpent with toil and heat,
In their looſe traces from the field retreat:
While curling ſmoaks from village-tops are ſeen,
And the fleet ſhades glide o'er the dusky green.
Reſound, ye hills, reſound my mournful lay!
Beneath yon' poplar oft we paſt the day:
Oft' on the rind I carv'd her am'rous vows,
While ſhe with garlands hung the bending boughs:
The garlands fade, the vows are worn away;
So dies her love, and ſo my hopes decay.
Reſound, ye hills, reſound my mournful ſtrain!
Now bright Arcturus glads the teeming grain,
Now golden fruits on loaded branches ſhine,
And grateful cluſters ſwell with floods of wine;
Now bluſhing berries paint the yellow grove;
Juſt Gods! ſhall all things yield returns but love?

Resound, ye hills, resound my mournful lay!
The shepherds cry, "Thy flocks are left a prey——
Ah! what avails it me, the flocks to keep,
Who lost my heart while I preserv'd my sheep.
Pan came, and ask'd, what magic caus'd my smart,
Or what ill eyes malignant glances dart?
What eyes but hers, alas, have pow'r to move!
And is there magic but what dwells in love?
Resound, ye hills, resound my mournful strains!
I'll fly from shepherds, flocks, and flow'ry plains.——
From shepherds, flocks, and plains, I may remove,
Forsake mankind, and all the world——but love!
I know thee, Love! on foreign Mountains bred,
Wolves gave thee suck, and savage Tygers fed.
Thou wert from Ætna's burning entrails torn,
Got by fierce whirlwinds, and in thunder born!
Resound, ye hills, resound my mournful lay!
Farewell, ye woods! adieu the light of day!
One leap from yonder cliff shall end my pains,
No more, ye hills, no more resound my strains!
Thus sung the shepherds till th' approach of night,
The skies yet blushing with departing light,
When falling dews with spangles deck'd the glade,
And the low sun had lengthen'd ev'ry shade.

Sacred ECLOGUE.

In Imitation of VIRGIL's POLLIO.

Advertiſement.

IN reading ſeveral paſſages of the Prophet Iſaiah, which foretell the coming of Chriſt and the felicities attending it, I could not but obſerve a remarkable parity between many of the thoughts, and thoſe in the Pollio of Virgil. This will not ſeem ſurpriſing, when we reflect, that the Eclogue was taken from a Sibylline prophecy on the ſame ſubject. One may judge that Virgil did not copy it line by line, but made uſe of ſuch ideas as beſt agreed with the nature of paſtoral poetry, and diſpoſed them in that manner which ſerved moſt to beautify his piece. I have endeavoured the ſame in this imitation of him, though without admitting any thing of my own; ſince it was written with this particular view, that the reader, by comparing the ſeveral thoughts, might ſee how far the images and deſcriptions of the Prophet are ſuperior to thoſe of the Poet. But as I fear I have prejudiced them by my management, I ſhall ſubjoin the paſſages of Iſaiah, and thoſe of Virgil, under the ſame diſadvantage of a literal tranſlation. P.

REMARKS.

VER, 13. Ye Heav'ns! from high the dewy nectar pour, And in ſoft ſilence ſhed the kindly ſhow'r!] His Original ſays, Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the ſkies pour down righteouſneſs: let the earth open, and let them bring forth ſalvation, and let righteouſneſs ſpring up together.—This is a very noble deſcription of divine grace ſhed abroad in the hearts of the faithful under the Goſpel diſpenſation. And the poet underſtood all its force, as appears from the two lines preceding theſe,—Th'Æthereal Spirit, etc. The prophet deſcribes this under the image of rain, which chiefly fits the firſt age of the Goſpel: The poet, under the idea of dew, which extends it to every age. And it was his purpoſe it ſhould be ſo underſtood, as appears from his expreſſion of ſoft ſilence, which agrees with the common not the extraordinary effuſions of the Holy Spirit. The term of dewy nectar, for divine grace, is wonderfully happy. For he who would moralize the ancient Mythology in the manner of Bacon, muſt ſay, that by the poetical nectar, can be meant only theological grace.

Where, in their bleſſings, all thoſe Gods appear.
See Pan with flocks, with fruits Pomona crown'd,
Here bluſhing Flora paints th' enamel'd ground,
Here Ceres' gifts in waving proſpect ſtand,
And nodding tempt the joyful reaper's hand;
Rich Induſtry ſits ſmiling on the plains,
And peace and plenty tell, a STUART reigns.
Not thus the land appear'd in ages paſt,
A dreary deſart, and a gloomy waſte,
To ſavage beaſts and ſavage laws a prey,
And kings more furious and ſevere than they;
Who claim'd the ſkies, diſpeopled air and floods,
The lonely lords of empty wilds and woods:
Cities laid waſte, they ſtorm'd the dens and caves,
(For wiſer brutes were backward to be ſlaves:)
What could be free, when lawleſs beaſts obey'd,
And ev'n the elements a tyrant ſway'd?
In vain kind ſeaſons ſwell'd the teeming grain,
Soft ſhow'rs diſtill'd, and ſuns grew warm in vain;

VARIATIONS.

VER. 49. Originally thus in the MS.
From towns laid waſte, to dens and caves they ran
(For who firſt ſtoop'd to be a ſlave was man.)

REMARKS.

Than which a nobler weight no mountain bears,
But Atlas only, which ſupports the ſpheres.

The compariſon is childiſh, for the ſtory of Atlas being fabulous, leaves no room for a compliment. Our Poet has been more artful (though he employs as fabulous a circumſtance in his compariſon) by ſhewing in what the nobility of the hills of Windſor Foreſt conſits —— not to ſpeak of the beautiful turn of wit.

Where, in their bleſſings, all thoſe Gods appear. etc.

VER. 45. ſavage laws] The Foreſt laws.

The ſwain with tears his fruſtrate labour yields,
And famiſh'd dies amidſt his ripen'd fields.
What wonder then, a beaſt or ſubject ſlain
Were equal crimes in a deſpotic reign?
Both doom'd alike, for ſportive Tyrants bled,
But while the ſubject ſtarv'd, the beaſt was fed.
Proud Nimrod firſt the bloody chace began,
A mighty hunter, and his prey was man:
Our haughty Norman boaſts that barb'rous name,
And makes his trembling ſlaves the royal game.
The fields are raviſh'd from th' induſtrious ſwains,
From men their cities, and from Gods their fanes:
The levell'd towns with weeds lie cover'd o'er;
The hollow winds thro' naked temples roar;
Round broken columns claſping ivy twin'd;
O'er heaps of ruin ſtalk'd the ſtately hind;
The fox obſcene to gaping tombs retires,
And ~~ſavage~~ howlings fill the ſacred quires.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 57, etc.

No wonder ſavages or ſubjects ſlain ——
But ſubjects ſtarv'd while ſavages were fed.

It was originally thus, but the word ſavages is not properly applied to beaſts but to men; which occaſioned the alteration. P.

VER. 72. And wolves with howling fill etc.

The Author thought this an error, wolves not being common in England at the time of the Conqueror. P.

Aw'd by his Nobles, by his Commons curſt,

Stretch'd o'er the Poor and Church his iron rod,
And ſerv'd alike his Vaſſals and his God.
Whom ev'n the Saxon ſpar'd and bloody Dane,
The wanton victims of his ſport remain.
But ſee, the man who ſpacious regions gave
A waſte for beaſts, himſelf deny'd a grave!
Stretch'd on the lawn his ſecond hope ſurvey,
At once the chaſer, and at once the prey:
Lo Rufus, tugging at the deadly dart,
Bleeds in the Foreſt like a wounded hart.
Succeeding monarchs heard the ſubjects cries,
Nor ſaw diſpleas'd the peaceful cottage riſe.
Then gath'ring flocks on unknown mountains fed,
O'er ſandy wilds were yellow harveſts ſpread,
The foreſts wonder'd at th' unuſual grain,
And ſecret tranſport touch'd the conſcious ſwain.

Remarks.

Ver. 80. himſelf deny'd a grave!] The place of his interment at Caen in Normandy was claimed by a Gentleman as his inheritance, the moment his ſervants were going to put him in his tomb: ſo that they were obliged to compound with the owner before they could perform the King's obſequies.

Virg.

Fair Liberty, Britannia's Goddeſs, rears
Her chearful head, and leads the golden years.
Ye vig'rous ſwains! while youth ferments your blood,
And purer ſpirits ſwell the ſprightly flood,
Now range the hills, the gameful woods beſet,
Wind the ſhrill horn, or ſpread the waving net.
When milder autumn ſummer's heat ſucceeds,
And in the new-ſhorn field the partridge feeds,
Before his lord the ready ſpaniel bounds,
Panting with hope, he tries the furrow'd grounds;
But when the tainted gales the game betray,
Couch'd cloſe he lies, and meditates the prey:
Secure they truſt th'unfaithful field beſet,
Till hov'ring o'er 'em ſweeps the ſwelling net.
Thus (if ſmall things we may with great compare)
When Albion ſends her eager ſons to war,
Some thoughtleſs Town, with eaſe and plenty bleſt,
Near, and more near, the cloſing lines inveſt;

VARIATIONS.

VER. 91.

VER. 107. It ſtood thus in the firſt Editions,

Pleas'd, in the Gen'ral's ſight, the hoſt lie down
Sudden before ſome unſuſpecting town;
The young, the old, one inſtant makes our prize,
And o'er their captive heads Britannia's ſtandard flies.

a Perhaps the Author thought it not allowable to deſcribe the ſeaſon by a circumſtance not proper to our climate, the vintage. P.

Sudden they ſeize th' amaz'd, defenceleſs prize,
And high in air Britannia's ſtandard flies.
See! from the brake the whirring pheaſant ſprings,
And mounts exulting on triumphant wings:
Short is his joy; he feels the fiery wound,
Flutters in blood, and panting beats the ground.
Ah! what avail his gloſſy, varying dyes,
His purple creſt, and ſcarlet-circled eyes,
The vivid green his ſhining plumes unfold,
His painted wings, and breaſt that flames with gold?
Nor yet, when moiſt Arcturus clouds the ſky,
The woods and fields their pleaſing toils deny.
To plains with well-breath'd beagles we repair,
And trace the mazes of the circling hare:
(Beaſts, urg'd by us, their fellow-beaſts purſue,
And learn of man each other to undo.)
With ſlaught'ring guns th' unweary'd fowler roves,
When froſts have whiten'd all the naked groves;
Where doves in flocks the leafleſs trees o'erſhade,
And lonely woodcocks haunt the wat'ry glade.
He lifts the tube, and levels with his eye;
Strait a ſhort thunder breaks the frozen ſky:
Oft, as in airy rings they ſkim the heath,
The clam'rous Lapwings feel the leaden death:
Oft, as the mounting larks their notes prepare,
They fall, and leave their little lives in air.

Where cooling vapours breathe along the mead,
The patient fiſher takes his ſilent ſtand,
Intent, his angle trembling in his hand:
With looks unmov'd, he hopes the ſcaly breed,
And eyes the dancing cork, and bending reed.
Our plenteous ſtreams a various race ſupply,
The bright-ey'd perch with fins of Tyrian dye,
The ſilver eel, in ſhining volumes roll'd,
The yellow carp, in ſcales bedrop'd with gold,
Swift trouts, diverſify'd with crimſon ſtains,
And pykes, the tyrants of the watry plains.
Now Cancer glows with Phœbus' fiery car:
The youth ruſh eager to the ſylvan war,
Swarm o'er the lawns, the foreſt walks ſurround,
Rouze the fleet hart, and chear the opening hound.
Th' impatient courſer pants in ev'ry vein,
And pawing, ſeems to beat the diſtant plain:
Hills, vales, and floods appear already croſs'd,

Theſe lines Mr. Dryden, in his preface to his tranſlation of Freſnoy's Art of painting, calls wonderfully fine, and ſays they would coſt him an hour, if he had the leiſure to tranſlate them, there is ſo much of beauty in the original; which was the reaſon, I ſuppoſe, why Mr. P. tried his ſtrength with them.

Hang o'er their courſers heads with eager ſpeed,
And earth rolls back beneath the flying ſteed.
Let old Arcadia boaſt her ample plain,
Th' immortal huntreſs, and her virgin-train;
Nor envy, Windſor! ſince thy ſhades have ſeen
As bright a Goddeſs, and as chaſte a QUEEN;
Whoſe care, like hers, protects the ſylvan reign,
The Earth's fair light, and Empreſs of the Main.
Here too, 'tis ſung, of old Diana ſtray'd,
And Cynthus' top forſook for Windſor ſhade;
Here was ſhe ſeen o'er airy waſtes to rove,
Seek the clear ſpring, or haunt the pathleſs grove;
Here arm'd with ſilver bows, in early dawn,
Her buſkin'd Virgins trac'd the dewy lawn.
Above the reſt a rural nymph was fam'd,
Thy offspring, Thames! the fair Lodona nam'd;
(Lodona's fate, in long oblivion caſt,
The Muſe ſhall ſing, and what ſhe ſings ſhall laſt.)
Scarce could the Goddeſs from her nymph be known,
But by the creſcent and the golden zone.
She ſcorn'd the praiſe of beauty, and the care;
A belt her waiſt, a fillet binds her hair;
A painted quiver on her ſhoulder ſounds,
And with her dart the flying deer ſhe wounds.

It chanc'd, as eager of the chace, the maid
Beyond the forest's verdant limits stray'd,
Pan saw and lov'd, and burning with desire
Pursu'd her flight, her flight encreas'd his fire.
Not half so swift the trembling doves can fly,
When the fierce eagle cleaves the liquid sky;
Not half so swiftly the fierce eagle moves,
When thro' the clouds he drives the trembling doves;
As from the God she flew with furious pace,
Or as the God, more furious, urg'd the chace.
Now fainting, sinking, pale, the nymph appears;
Now close behind, his sounding steps she hears;
And now his shadow reach'd her as she run,
His shadow lengthen'd by the setting sun;
And now his shorter breath, with sultry air,
Pants on her neck, and fans her parting hair.
In vain on father Thames she calls for aid,
Nor could Diana help her injur'd maid.
Faint, breathless, thus she pray'd, nor pray'd in vain;
"Ah Cynthia! ah — tho' banish'd from thy train,
"Let me, O let me, to the shades repair,
"My native shades—there weep, and murmur there.
She said, and melting as in tears she lay,

The ſilver ſtream her virgin coldneſs keeps,
For ever murmurs, and for ever weeps;
Still bears the name the hapleſs virgin bore,
And bathes the foreſt where ſhe rang'd before.

And with celeſtial tears augments the waves.
Oft in her glaſs the muſing ſhepherd ſpies
The headlong mountains and the downward ſkies,
The watry landſkip of the pendant woods,
And abſent trees that tremble in the floods;
In the clear azure gleam the flocks are ſeen,
And floating foreſts paint the waves with green,
Thro' the fair ſcene roll ſlow the ling'ring ſtreams,
Then foaming pour along, and ruſh into the Thames.

Thou too, great father of the Britiſh floods!
With joyful pride ſurvey'ſt our lofty woods;

The Kennet ſwift, for ſilver eels renown'd;
The Loddon ſlow, with verdant alders crown'd;
Cole, whoſe dark ſtreams his flow'ry iſlands lave;
And chalky Wey, that rolls a milky wave:
The blue, tranſparent Vandalis appears;
The gulphy Lee his ſedgy treſſes rears;
And ſullen Mole, that hides his diving flood;
And ſilent Darent, ſtain'd with Daniſh blood.
High in the midſt, upon his urn reclin'd,
(His ſea-green mantle waving with the wind)
The God appear'd: he turn'd his azure eyes
Where Windſor-domes and pompous turrets riſe;
Then bow'd and ſpoke; the winds forget to roar,
And the huſh'd waves glide ſoftly to the ſhore.
Hail, ſacred Peace! hail long-expected days,
That Thames's glory to the ſtars ſhall raiſe!
Tho' Tyber's ſtreams immortal Rome behold,
Tho' foaming Hermus ſwells with tydes of gold,

No more my ſons ſhall dye with Britiſh blood
Red Iber's ſands, or Iſter's foaming flood:
Safe on my ſhore each unmoleſted ſwain
Shall tend the flocks, or reap the bearded grain;
The ſhady empire ſhall retain no trace
Of war or blood, but in the ſylvan chace;
The trumpet ſleep, while chearful horns are blown,
And arms employ'd on birds and beaſts alone.

Where clearer flames glow round the frozen Pole;
Or under southern skies exalt their sails,
Led by new stars, and borne by spicy gales!
For me the balm shall bleed, and amber flow,
The coral redden, and the ruby glow,
The pearly shell its lucid globe infold,
And Phœbus warm the rip'ning ore to gold.
The time shall come, when free as seas or wind
Unbounded Thames shall flow for all mankind,

VER. 421.

Quo, Muſa, tendis? deſine pervicax
Referre ſermones Deorum et
Magna modis tenuare parvis. Hor.

My humble Muſe, in unambitious ſtrains,
Paints the green foreſts and the flow'ry plains,
Where Peace deſcending bids her olives ſpring,
And ſcatters bleſſings from her dove-like wing.
Ev'n I more ſweetly paſs my careleſs days,
Pleas'd in the ſilent ſhade with empty praiſe;
Enough for me, that to the liſt'ning ſwains
First in theſe fields I ſung the ſylvan ſtrains.

ODE for MUSIC

ON

ST. CECILIA'S DAY.

I.

DEſcend, ye Nine! deſcend and ſing;
The breathing inſtruments inſpire,
Wake into voice each ſilent ſtring,
And ſweep the ſounding lyre!
In a ſadly-pleaſing ſtrain
Let the warbling lute complain:
Let the loud trumpet ſound,
'Till the roofs all around
The ſhrill echos rebound:

REMARKS.

Ode for Muſic.] This is one of the moſt artful as well as ſublime of our Poet's ſmaller compoſitions. The firſt ſtanza is a deſcription of the various tones and meaſures in muſic. The ſecond relates their power over the ſeveral paſſions in general. The third, their uſe in inſpiring the Heroic paſſions in particular. The fourth, fifth, and ſixth, their power over all nature in the fable of Orpheus's expedition to hell; which ſubject of illuſtration aroſe naturally out of the preceding mention of the Argonautic expedition, where Orpheus gives an example of the uſe of Muſic to inſpire the heroic paſſions. The ſeventh and laſt concludes in praiſe of Muſic, and the advantages of the ſacred above the prophane.

VER. 7. Let the loud trumpet ſound, etc.] Our Author in his rules for good writing had ſaid, that the ſound ſhould be an echo to the ſenſe. The graces it adds to the

While in more lengthen'd notes and ſlow,
The deep, majeſtic, ſolemn organs blow.
Hark! the number ſoft and clear,
Gently ſteal upon the ear;
Now louder, and yet louder riſe
And fill with ſpreading ſounds the ſkies;
Exulting in triumph now ſwell the bold notes,
In broken air, trembling, the wild muſic floats;
'Till, by degrees, remote and ſmall,
The ſtrains decay,
And melt away,
In a dying, dying fall.

II.

By Muſic, minds an equal temper know,
Nor ſwell too high, nor ſink too low.
If in the breaſt tumultuous joys ariſe,
Muſic her ſoft, aſſuaſive voice applies;
Or when the ſoul is preſs'd with cares,
Exalts her in enlivening airs.
Warriors ſhe fires with animated ſounds;
Pours balm into the bleeding lover's wounds:
Melancholy lifts her head,
Morpheus rouzes from his bed,
Sloth unfolds her arms and wakes,
Lift'ning Envy drops her ſnakes;
Inteſtine war no more our Paſſions wage,
And giddy Factions hear away their rage.

REMARKS.

harmony are obvious. But we ſhould never have ſeen all the advantages ariſing from it had this ode not been written. In which, one may venture to ſay, is found all the harmony that ſound, when it comes in aid of ſenſe, is capable of producing.

III.

But when our Country's cauſe provokes to Arms,
How martial muſic ev'ry boſom warms!
So when the firſt bold veſſel dar'd the ſeas,
High on the ſtern the Thracian rais'd his ſtrain,
While Argo ſaw her kindred trees
Deſcend from Pelion to the main.
Tranſported demi-gods ſtood round,
And men grew heroes at the ſound,
Enflam'd with glory's charms:
Each chief his ſev'nfold ſhield diſplay'd,
And half unſheath'd the ſhining blade:
And ſeas, and rocks, and ſkies rebound
To arms, to arms, to arms!

IV.

But when thro' all th' infernal bounds,
Which flaming Phlegeton ſurrounds,
Love, ſtrong as Death, the Poet led
To the pale nations of the dead,
What ſounds were heard,
What ſcenes appear'd,
O'er all the dreary coaſts!
Dreadful gleams,
Diſmal ſcreams,
Fires that glow,
Shrieks of woe,
Sullen moans,
Hollow groans,
And cries of tortur'd ghoſts!
But hark! he ſtrikes the golden lyre;
And ſee! the tortur'd ghoſts reſpire,

See, ſhady forms advance!
Thy ſtone, O Syſiphus, ſtands ſtill,
Ixion reſts upon his wheel,
And the pale ſpectres dance!
The Furies ſink upon their iron beds,
And ſnakes uncurl'd hang liſt'ning round their heads.

V.

By the ſtreams that ever flow,
By the fragrant winds that blow
O'er th' Elyſian flow'rs;
By thoſe happy ſouls who dwell
In yellow meads of Aſphodel,
Or Amaranthine bow'rs;
By the hero's armed ſhades,
Glitt'ring thro' the gloomy glades;
By the youths that dy'd for love,
Wand'ring in the myrtle grove,
Reſtore, reſtore Eurydice to life:
Oh take the huſband, or return the wife!

He ſung, and hell conſented
To hear the Poet's prayer:
Stern Proſerpine relented,
And gave him back the fair.
Thus ſong could prevail
O'er death, and o'er hell,
A conqueſt how hard and how glorious?
Tho' fate had faſt bound her
With Styx nine times round her,
Yet muſic and love were victorious.

VI.

But ſoon, too ſoon, the lover turns his eyes:
Again ſhe falls, again ſhe dies, ſhe dies!

low wilt thou now the fatal sisters move?
No crime was thine, if 'tis no crime to love.
Now under hanging mountains,
Beside the fall of fountains,
Or where Hebrus wanders,
Rolling in Mæanders,
All alone,
Unheard, unknown,
He makes his moan;
And calls her ghost,
For ever, ever, ever lost!
Now with Furies surrounded,
Despairing, confounded,
He trembles, he glows,
Amidst Rhodope's snows:
ee, wild as the winds, o'er the desart he flies;
ark! Hæmus resounds with the Bacchanals cries—Ah see, he dies!
et ev'n in death Eurydice he sung,
urydice still trembled on his tongue,
Eurydice the woods,
Eurydice the floods,
urydice the rocks, and hollow mountains rung.

VII.

Music the fiercest grief can charm,
And fate's severest rage disarm:
Music can soften pain to ease,
And make despair and madness please:
Our joys below it can improve,
And antedate the bliss above.
This the divine Cecilia found,
nd to her Maker's praise confin'd the sound.

When the full organ joins the tuneful quire,
Th' immortal pow'rs incline their ear,
Borne on the ſwelling notes our ſouls aſpire,
While ſolemn airs improve the ſacred fire;
And Angels lean from heav'n to hear.
Of Orpheus now no more let Poets tell,
To bright Cecilia greater power is giv'n;
His numbers rais'd a ſhade from hell,
Hers lift the ſoul to heav'n.

TWO CHORUS'S TO THE Tragedy of BRUTUS[a].

CHORUS of ATHENIANS.

STROPHE I.

YE ſhades, where ſacred truth is ſought;
Groves, where immortal Sages taught:
Where heav'nly viſions Plato fir'd,
And Epicurus lay inſpir'd!
In vain your guiltleſs laurels ſtood
Unſpotted long with human blood.

REMARKS.

THESE two Chorus's were compoſed to enrich a very poor Play; but they had the uſual effect of ill-adjuſted Ornaments, to make its meanneſs but the more conſpicuous.

[a] Altered from Shakeſpear by the Duke of Buckingham, at whoſe deſire theſe two Chorus's were compoſed to ſupply as many, wanting in his play. They were ſet many years afterwards by the famous Bononcini, and performed at Buckingham-houſe. P.

VER. 3. Where heav'nly viſions Plato fir'd, And Epicurus lay inſpir'd!] The propriety of theſe lines ariſes from hence, that Brutus, one of the Heroes of this Play, was of the Old Academy; and Caſſius, the other, was an Epicurean; but this had not been enough to juſtify the Poet's choice, had not Plato's ſyſtem of Divinity, and Epicurus's ſyſtem of Morals, been the moſt rational amongſt the various ſects of Greek Philoſophy.

War, horrid war, your thoughtful walks invades,
And ſteel now glitters in the Muſes ſhades.

ANTISTROPHE I.

Oh heav'n-born ſiſters! ſource of art!
Who charm the ſenſe, or mend the heart;
Who lead fair Virtue's train along,
Moral Truth, and myſtic Song!
To what new clime, what diſtant ſky,
Forſaken, friendleſs, ſhall ye fly?
Say, will you bleſs the bleak Atlantic ſhore?
Or bid the furious Gaul be rude no more?

STROPHE II.

When Athens ſinks by fates unjuſt,
When wild Barbarians ſpurn her duſt;
Perhaps ev'n Britain's utmoſt ſhore
Shall ceaſe to bluſh with ſtranger's gore,
See Arts her ſavage ſons controul,
And Athens riſing near the pole!
'Till ſome new Tyrant lifts his purple hand,
And civil madneſs tears them from the land.

ANTISTROPHE II.

Ye Gods! what juſtice rules the ball?
Freedom and Arts together fall;

REMARKS.

VER. 12. Moral truth AND myſtic ſong.] He had expreſſed himſelf better had he ſaid,

" Moral truth IN myſtic ſong!

In the Antiſtrophe he turns from Philoſophy to Mythology; and Mythology is nothing but moral truth in myſtic ſong.

Fools grant whate'er Ambition craves,
And men, once ignorant, are ſlaves.
Oh curs'd effects of civil hate,
In ev'ry age, in ev'ry ſtate!
Still, when the luſt of tyrant power ſucceeds,
Some Athens periſhes, ſome Tully bleeds.

CHORUS of Youths and Virgins.

SEMICHORUS.

OH Tyrant Love! haſt thou poſſeſt
The prudent, learn'd, and virtuous breaſt?
Wiſdom and wit in vain reclaim,
And Arts but ſoften us to feel thy flame.
Love, ſoft intruder, enters here,
But entring learns to be ſincere.
Marcus with Bluſhes owns he loves,
And Brutus tenderly reproves.
Why Virtue, doſt thou blame deſire,
Which Nature has impreſt?
Why, Nature, doſt thou ſooneſt fire
The mild and gen'rous breaſt?

CHORUS.

Love's purer flames the Gods approve;
The Gods and Brutus bend to love:
Brutus for abſent Portia ſighs,
And ſterner Caſſius melts at Junia's eyes.
What is looſe love? a tranſient guſt,
Spent in a ſudden ſtorm of luſt,
A vapour fed from wild deſire,
A wand'ring, ſelf conſuming fire,
But Hymen's kinder flames unite;
And burn for ever one;
Chaſte as cold Cynthia's virgin light,
Productive as the Sun.

VER. 9. Why, Virtue, etc.] In alluſion to that famous conceit of Guarini,

" Se il peccare è sì dolce, etc.

SEMICHORUS.

Oh ſource of ev'ry ſocial tye,
United wiſh, and mutual joy!
What various joys on one attend,
As ſon, as father, brother, huſband, friend?
Whether his hoary ſire he ſpies,
While thouſand grateful thoughts ariſe;
Or meets his ſpouſe's fonder eye;
Or views his ſmiling progeny;
What tender paſſions take their turns,
What home-felt raptures move?
His heart now melts, now leaps, now burns,
With rev'rence, hope, and love.

CHORUS.

Hence guilty joys, diſtaſtes, ſurmizes,
Hence falſe tears, deceits, diſguiſes,
Dangers, doubts, delays, ſurprizes;
Fires that ſcorch, yet dare not ſhine:
Pureſt love's unwaſting treaſure,
Conſtant faith, fair hope, long leiſure,
Days of eaſe, and nights of pleaſure;
Sacred Hymen! theſe are thine*.

REMARKS.

* Theſe two Chorus's are enough to ſhew us his great talents for this ſpecies of Poetry, and to make us lament he did not proſecute his purpoſe in executing ſome plans he had chalked out; but the Character of the Managers of Playhouſes was what (he ſaid) ſoon determined him to lay aſide all thoughts of this nature.

ODE on SOLITUDE[a].

HAPPY the man, whose wish and care
A few paternal acres bound,
Content to breathe his native air,
In his own ground.

Whose herds with milk, whose fields with bread,
Whose flocks supply him with attire,
Whose trees in summer yield him shade,
In winter fire.

Blest, who can unconcern'dly find
Hours, days, and years slide soft away,
In health of body, peace of mind,
Quiet by day.

Sound sleep by night; study and ease,
Together mixt; sweet recreation;
And Innocence, which most does please
With meditation.

Thus let me live, unseen, unknown,
Thus unlamented let me die,
Steal from the world, and not a stone
Tell where I lie.

[a] This was a very early production of our Author written at about twelve years old. P.

The dying CHRISTIAN to his SOUL.

ODE[d].

I.

VITAL ſpark of heav'nly flame!
Quit, oh quit this mortal frame:
Trembling, hoping, ling'ring, flying,
Oh the pain, the bliſs of dying!
Ceaſe, fond Nature, ceaſe thy ſtrife,
And let me languiſh into life.

II.

Hark! they whiſper; Angels ſay,
Siſter Spirit, come away.
What is this abſorbs me quite?
Steals my ſenſes, ſhuts my ſight,
Drowns my ſpirits, draws my breath?
Tell me, my Soul, can this be Death?

III.

The world recedes; it diſappears!
Heav'n opens on my eyes! my ears
With ſounds ſeraphic ring:
Lend, lend your wings! I mount! I fly!
O Grave! where is thy Victory?
O Death! where is thy Sting?

REMARKS.

[d] This ode was written in imitation of the famous ſonnet of Hadrian to his departing ſoul; but as much ſuperior in ſenſe and ſublimity to his original, as the Chriſtian Religion is to the Pagan.

AN ESSAY ON CRITICISM.

'TIS hard to say, if greater want of skill
Appear in writing or in judging ill;
But, of the two, less dang'rous is th' offence
To tire our patience, than mislead our sense.

COMMENTARY.

An Essay] The Poem is in one book, but divided into three principal parts or members. The first [to v. 201.] gives rules for the Study of the Art of Criticism: the second [from thence to v. 560.] exposes the Causes of wrong Judgment; and the third [from thence to the end] prescribes the Morals of the Critic.

In order to a right understanding of this poem, it will be necessary to observe, that tho' it be intitled simply an Essay on Criticism, yet several of the precepts relate equally to the good writing as well as to the true judging of a poem. This is so far from violating the Unity of the Subject, that it rounds and compleats it: or from disordering the regularity of the Form, that it produces the highest beauty which can arise out of method, as will appear by the following considerations: 1. It was impossible to give a full and exact idea of the Art of poetical Criticism, without considering, at the same

Some few in that, but numbers err in this,
Ten cenſure wrong for one who writes amiſs;
A fool might once himſelf alone expoſe,
Now one in verſe makes many more in proſe.

COMMENTARY.

time, the Art of Poetry; ſo far as Poetry is an Art. Theſe therefore being cloſely connected in nature, the Author has with much judgment reciprocally interwoven the precepts of both thro' his whole poem. 2. As all the rules of the ancient Critics were taken from Poets who copied nature, this is another reaſon why every Poet ſhould be a Critic: Therefore, as the ſubject is poetical Criticiſm, it is frequently addreſſed to the critical Poet. And 3dly, the Art of Criticiſm is as neceſſarily, and much more uſefully exerciſed in writing than in judging.

But Readers have been miſled by the modeſty of the Title: which only promiſes an Art of Criticiſm, in a treatiſe, and that a compleat one, of the Art both of Criticiſm and Poetry. This, and the not attending to the conſiderations offered above, perhaps was what miſled a very candid writer, after having given this Piece all the praiſes on the ſide of genius and poetry which his true taſte could not refuſe it, to ſay, that the obſervations follow one another like thoſe in Horace's Art of Poetry, without that methodical regularity which would have been requiſite in a proſe writer. Spec. N° 235. I do not ſee how method can hurt any one grace of Poetry; or what prerogative there is in verſe to diſpenſe with regularity. The remark is falſe in every part of it. Mr. Pope's Eſſay on Criticiſm, the Reader will ſoon ſee, is a regular piece: And a very learned Critic has lately ſhewn, that Horace had the ſame attention to method in his Art of Poetry.

VER. 1. 'Tis hard to ſay, etc.] The Poem opens [from v. 1 to 9.] with ſhewing the uſe and ſeaſonableneſs of the ſubject. Its uſe, from the greater miſchief in wrong Criticiſm than in ill Poetry, this only tiring,

'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
Go just alike, yet each believes his own. 10
In Poets as true genius is but rare,
True Taste as seldom is the Critic's share;

COMMENTARY.

that misleading the reader: Its seasonableness, from the growing number of false Critics, which now vastly exceeds that of bad Poets.

VER. 9. 'Tis with our Judgments, etc.] The author having shewn us the expediency of his subject, the Art of Criticism, next inquires [from v. 8 to 15.] into the necessary Qualities of a true Critic: And observes first, that JUDGMENT, simply and alone, is not sufficient to constitute this character, because Judgment, like the artificial measures of Time, goes different, and yet each relies upon his own. The reason is conclusive; and the similitude extremely just. For Judgment, when alone, is always regulated, or at least much influenced by custom, fashion, and habit, and never certain and constant but when founded upon TASTE: which is the same in the Critic, as GENIUS in the Poet: both are derived from Heaven, and like the Sun (the natural measure of Time) always constant and equal.

Nor need we wonder that Judgment alone will not make a Critic in poetry, when we see that it will not make a Poet. And on examination we shall find, that Genius and Taste are but one and the same faculty, differently exerting itself under different names, in the two professions of Poet and Critic. For the Art of Poetry consists in selecting, out of all those images which present themselves to the fancy, such of them as are truly poetical: And the Art of Criticism is judiciously discerning, and fully relishing what it finds so selected. 'Tis the same operation of the mind in both cases, and consequently, exerted by the same faculty. All the difference is, that in the Poet this faculty is eminently joined with a bright imagination, and extensive compre-

And cenſure freely who have written well.

COMMENTARY.

henſion, which provide ſtores for the ſelection, and can form that ſelection, by proportioned parts, into a regular whole: In the Critic, with a ſolid judgment and accurate diſcernment; which penetrate into the cauſes of an excellence, and can ſhew that excellence in all its variety of lights. Longinus had taſte in an eminent degree; ſo this, which is indeed common to all true Critics, our Author makes his diſtinguiſhing character,

Thee, bold Longinus! all the Nine inſpire,
And bleſs their Critic with a Poet's fire.

VER. 15. Let ſuch teach others, etc.] But it is not enough that the Critic hath theſe natural endowments to entitle him to the exerciſe of his Art, he ought, as our Author ſhews us [from v. 14 to 19] to give a further teſt of his qualification, by ſome acquired talents: And this on two accounts: 1. Becauſe the office of a Critic is an exerciſe of Authority. 2. Becauſe he being naturally as partial to his Judgment as the Poet is to his Wit, his partiality would have nothing to correct it, as that of the perſon judged hath. Therefore ſome teſt is reaſonable; and the beſt and moſt unexceptionable is his having written well himſelf, an approved remedy againſt Critical partiality; and the ſureſt means of ſo maturing the Judgment, as to reap with glory what Longinus calls the laſt and moſt perfect fruits of much ſtudy and experience. Η ΓΑΡ ΤΩΝ ΛΟΓΩΝ ΚΡΙΣΙΣ ΠΟΛΛΗΣ ΕΣΤΙ ΠΕΙΡΑΣ ΤΕΛΕΥΤΑΙΟΝ ΕΠΙΓΕΝΝΗΜΑ.

NOTES.

VER. 15. Let ſuch teach others] Qui ſcribit artificioſe, ab aliis commode ſcripta facile intelligere poterit. Cic. ad Herenn. lib. 4. De pictore, ſculptore, fictore, niſi artifex, judicare non poteſt. Pliny. P.

Authors are partial to their wit, 'tis true,
But are not Critics to their judgment too?
Yet if we look more closely, we shall find
Most have the seeds of judgment in their mind:
Nature affords at least a glimm'ring light;
The lines, tho' touch'd but faintly, are drawn right.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 19. Yet if we look, etc.] But having been so free with this fundamental quality of Criticism, Judgment, as to charge it with inconstancy and partiality, and as often warped by custom and affection; that this may not be mistaken, he next explains [from v. 18 to 36] the nature of Judgment, and the accidents occasioning those disorders before objected to it. He owns, that the seeds of Judgment are indeed sown in the minds of most men, but by ill culture, as it springs up, it generally runs wild: either on the one hand, by false knowledge which pedants call Philology; or by false reasoning which Philosophers call School-learning: Or on the other, by false wit which is not regulated by sense; or by false politeness which is solely regulated by the fashion. Both these sorts, who have their Judgments thus doubly depraved, the poet observes, are naturally turned to censure and reprehension; only with this difference, that the Dunce always affects to be on the reasoning, and the Fool on the laughing side.—And thus, at the same time, our author proves the truth of his introductory observation, that the number of bad Critics is vastly superior to that of bad Poets.

NOTES.

VER. 20. Most have the seeds] Omnes tacito quodam sensu, sine ulla arte, aut ratione, quæ sint in artibus ac rationibus recta et prava dijudicant. Cic. de Orat. lib. iii. P.

But as the slightest sketch, if justly trac'd,
Is by ill-colouring but the more disgrac'd,
So by false learning is good sense defac'd:
Some are bewilder'd in the maze of schools,
And some made coxcombs Nature meant but fools.
In search of wit these lose their common sense,
And then turn Critics in their own defence:
Each burns alike, who can, or cannot write,
Or with a Rival's, or an Eunuch's spite.

Variations.

Between v. 25 and 26 were these lines, since omitted by the author.

Many are spoil'd by that pedantic throng,
Who with great pains teach youth to reason wrong.
Tutors, like Virtuoso's, oft inclin'd
By strange transfusion to improve the mind,
Draw off the sense we have, to pour in new;
Which yet, with all their skill, they ne'er could do. P.

Notes.

Ver. 25. So by false learning] Plus sine doctrina prudentia, quam sine prudentia valet doctrina. Quint. P.

Ver. 26, 27. Some are bewilder'd, etc.] This thought is taken from Lord Rochester, but more decently expressed:

God never made a Coxcomb worth a groat,
We owe that name to industry and arts.

Ver. 28. In search of wit these lose their common sense,] This observation is extremely just. Search of wit is not only the occasion but the efficient cause of loss of common sense. For wit consisting in chusing out, and setting together, such ideas from whose likenesses pleasant pictures are made in the fancy; the Judgment, thro' an habitual search of Wit, loses by degrees its faculty of seeing the true relations of things; in which consists the exercise of common sense.

All fools have ſtill an itching to deride,
And fain would be upon the laughing ſide.
If Mævius ſcribble in Apollo's ſpight,
There are, who judge ſtill worſe than he can write.
Some have at firſt for Wits, then Poets paſt,
Turn'd Critics next, and prov'd plain fools at laſt.
Some neither can for Wits nor Critics paſs,
As heavy mules are neither horſe nor aſs.
Thoſe half-learn'd witlings, num'rous in our iſle,
As half-form'd inſects on the banks of Nile;
Unfiniſh'd things, one knows not what to call,
Their generation's ſo equivocal:

COMMENTARY.

VER. 36. Some have at firſt for Wits, etc.] The poet having enumerated, in this Account of the nature of Judgment and its various depravations, the ſeveral ſorts of bad Critics, and ranked them into two general Claſſes; as the firſt ſort, namely the men ſpoiled by falſe learning, are but few in compariſon of the other, and likewiſe come leſs within his main view (which is poetical Criticiſm) but keep groveling at the bottom amongſt words and letters, he thought it here ſufficient juſt to have mentioned them, propoſing to do them right elſewhere. But the men ſpoiled by falſe taſte are innumerable; and Theſe are his proper concern: He

NOTES.

VER. 32. All fools have ſtill an itching to deride, And fain would be upon the laughing ſide.] The ſentiment is juſt. And if Hobbes's account of laughter be true, that it ariſes from pride, we ſee the reaſon of it. The expreſſion too is fine, it alludes to the condition of Idiots and natural-fools who are always on the grin.

therefore, from v 35 to 46. sub-divides them again into the two classes of the volatile and heavy: He describes in few words the quick progress of the One thro' Criticism, from false wit to plain folly, where they end; and the fixed station of the Other between the confines of both; who under the name of Witlings, have neither end nor measure. A kind of half formed creature from the equivocal generation of vivacity and dulness, like those on the banks of Nile, from heat and mud.

VER 46. But you who seek, etc.] Our author having thus far, by way of INTRODUCTION, explained the nature, use, and abuse of Criticism, in a figurative description of the qualities and characters of Critics, proceeds now to deliver the precepts of the Art. The first of which, from v. 47 to 68. is, that he who sets up for a Critic should previously examine his own strength, and see how far he is qualified for the exercise of his profession. He puts him in a way to make this discovery, in that admirable direction given v. 51.

NOTES.

received, whether it be true or false, to justify a poet's use of it to set off his wit. But to recommend his argument he should be cautious how he uses any but the true. For falsehood, when it is set too near, will tarnish the truth he would recommend. Besides, the analogy between natural and moral truth makes the principles of true Philosophy the fittest for his use. Our Poet has been careful in observing this rule.

Launch not beyond your depth, but be discreet,
And mark that point where sense and dullness meet.
Nature to all things fix'd the limits fit,
And wisely curb'd proud man's pretending wit.
As on the land while here the ocean gains,
In other parts it leaves wide sandy plains;

Commentary.

And mark that point where sense and dulness meet.

He had shewn above, that Judgment, without Taste or Genius, is equally incapable of making a Critic or a Poet: In whatsoever subject then the Critic's Taste no longer accompanies his Judgment, there he may be assured he is going out of his depth. This our author finely calls, that point where sense and dulness meet.

And immediately adds the REASON of his precept; the Author of Nature having so constituted the mental faculties, that one of them can never excel but at the expence of another.

From this state and ordination of the mental faculties, and the influence and effects they have one on another, our Poet draws this CONSEQUENCE, that no one genius can excell in more than one Art or Science.

Notes.

VER. 51. And mark, that point where sense and dulness meet.] Besides the peculiar sense explained above in the comment, the words have still a more general meaning, and caution us against going on, when our Ideas begin to grow obscure; as we are apt to do, tho' that obscurity is a monition that we should leave off; for it arises either thro' our small acquaintance with the subject, or the incomprehensibility of its nature. In which circumstances a genius will always write as heavily as a dunce. An observation well worth the attention of all profound writers.

Thus in the ſoul while memory prevails,
The ſolid pow'r of underſtanding fails;
Where beams of warm imagination play,
The memory's ſoft figures melt away.
One ſcience only will one genius fit;
So vaſt is art, ſo narrow human wit:
Not only bounded to peculiar arts,
But oft' in thoſe confin'd to ſingle parts.

COMMENTARY.

The conſequence ſhews the neceſſity of the precept, juſt as the premiſſes, from which it is drawn, ſhew the reaſonableneſs of it.

VER. 56.

Thus in the ſoul while memory prevails,
The ſolid pow'r of underſtanding fails:
Where beams of warm imagination play,
The memory's ſoft figures melt away.]

Theſe obſervations are collected from an intimate knowledge of human nature. The cauſe of that languor and heavineſs in the underſtanding, which is almoſt inſeparable from a very ſtrong and tenacious memory, ſeems to be a want of the proper exerciſe and activity of that Power; the underſtanding being rather paſſive while the memory is cultivating. As to the other appearance, the decay of memory by the vigorous exerciſe of Fancy, the poet himſelf ſeems to have intimated the cauſe of it in the epithet he has given to the Imagination. For if, according to the Atomic Philoſophy, the memory of things be preſerved in a chain of ideas, produced by the animal ſpirits moving in continued trains; the force and rapidity of the Imagination perpetually breaking and diſſipating the links of this chain by forming new aſſociations, muſt neceſſarily weaken and diſorder the recollective faculty.

Like Kings we lose the conquests gain'd before,
By vain ambition still to make them more;
Each might his sev'ral province well command,
Would all but stoop to what they understand.

First follow Nature, and your judgment frame
By her just standard, which is still the same:
Unerring NATURE, still divinely bright,
One clear, unchang'd, and universal light,
Life, force, and beauty, must to all impart,
At once the source, and end, and test of Art.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 68. First follow Nature, etc.] The Critic observing the directions here given, and finding himself qualified for his office, is shewn next how to exercise it. And as he was to attend to Nature for a Call, so he is first and principally to follow her when called. And here again in this, as in the foregoing precept, the poet [from v. 67 to 88.] shews both the fitness and the necessity of it. It's fitness, 1. Because Nature is the source of poetick Art; that Art being only a representation of Nature, who is its great exemplar and original. 2 Because Nature is the end of Art; the design of poetry being to convey the knowledge of Nature in the most agreeable manner. 3. Because Nature is the test of Art, as she is unerring, constant and still the same. Hence the poet observes, that as Nature is the source, she conveys life to Art: As she is the end, she conveys force to it, for the force of any thing arises from its being directed to its end: And, as she is the

NOTES.

VER. 67. Would all but stoop to what they understand.] The expression is delicate, and implies what is very true, that most men think it a degradation of their genius to employ it it in cultivating what lies level to their comprehension, but had rather exercise their ambition in subduing what is placed above it.

teſt, ſhe conveys beauty to it, for every thing acquires beauty by its being reduced to its true ſtandard. Such is the ſenſe of thoſe two important lines,

Life, force, and beauty muſt to all impart,
At once the ſource, and end, and teſt of Art.

We now come to the neceſſity of the Precept. The two great conſtituent qualities of a Compoſition, as ſuch, are Art and Wit: But neither of theſe attains perfection, 'till the firſt be hid, and the other judiciouſly reſtrained; which is only then when Nature is exactly followed; for then Art never makes a parade, nor can Wit commit an extravagance. Art, while it adheres to Nature, and has ſo large a fund in the reſources which Nature ſupplies, diſpoſes every thing with ſo much eaſe and ſimplicity, that we ſee nothing but thoſe natural images it works with, while itſelf ſtands unobſerv'd behind: But when Art leaves Nature, deluded either by the bold extravagance of Fancy, or the quaint odneſſes of Faſhion, ſhe is then obliged at every ſtep to come forward, in a painful or pompous oſtentation, in order to cover, to ſoften, or to regulate the ſhocking diſproportion of unnatural images. In the firſt caſe, the poet compares art to the Soul within, informing a beauteous Body; but we generally find it, in the laſt, only like the outward Habit, bolſtering up, by the Taylor's ſkill, the defects of a mis-ſhapen one.—As to Wit, it might perhaps be imagined that this needed only Judgment to govern it: But, as he well obſerves,

Wit and Judgment often are at ſtrife,

They want therefore ſome friendly Mediator or Recon-

But having, in the previous obſervation, ſufficiently explained the nature of ancient Criticiſm, he enters on the ſubject [treated of from v. 91 to 118] with a ſublime deſcription of its End; which was to illuſtrate the beauties of the beſt Writers, in order to excite others to an emulation of their excellence. From the admiration which theſe Ideas raiſe in him, the poet is naturally brought back to reflect on the degeneracy of modern Criticiſm: And as the reſtoring the Temple of Minerva at Athens; as that Ariſtotle's ſhould make a perfect Judge of wit, without the ſtudy of Homer and Virgil. Theſe therefore he principally recommends to complete the Critic in his Art. But as the latter of theſe Poets has, by ſuperficial judges, been conſidered rather as a copyer of Homer, than an original, our Author obviates that common error, and ſhews it to have ariſen (as often errors does) from a truth viz. that Homer and Nature were the ſame; and how that the ambitious young Poet, though he ſcorned to ſtoop at any thing ſhort of Nature, when he came to underſtand this great truth, had the prudence to contemplate Nature in the place where ſhe was ſeen to moſt advantage, collected in all her charms in the clear mirror of Homer. Hence it would follow, that, though Virgil ſtudied Nature, yet the vulgar reader would believe him to be a copier of Homer; and though he copied Homer, yet the judicious reader would ſee him to be an imitator of Nature: the fineſt praiſe which any one, who came after Homer, could receive.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 200. T' admire ſuperior ſenſe, and doubt their own.] This line concludes the firſt diviſion of the poem; in which we ſee the ſubject of the firſt and ſecond part, and likewiſe the connexion they have with one another. It ſerves likewiſe to introduce the ſecond. The effect of ſtudying the Ancients, as hitherto recommended, would be the admiration of their ſuperior ſenſe; which, if it will not of itſelf diſpoſe Moderns to a diffidence of their own (one of the great uſes, as well as natural fruits of that ſtudy) the poet, to help forward their modeſty, in his ſecond part ſhews them (in a regular deduction of the cauſes and effects of wrong Judgment) their own image and amiable turn of mind.

ticiſm, the ſecond is employ'd in explaining the Impediments to it. The order of the two parts is judicious. For the cauſes of wrong Judgment being Pride, ſuperficial Learning, a bounded Capacity, and Partiality; Thoſe to whom this part is principally addreſſed, would not readily be brought either to ſee the malignity of the cauſes, or to own themſelves concerned in the effects, had not the Author previouſly both enlightened and convicted them, by the foregoing obſervations, on the vaſtneſs of Art, and narrowneſs of Wit; the extenſive ſtudy of human Nature and Antiquity; and the Characters of ancient Poetry and Criticiſm; the natural remedies to the four epidemic diſorders he is now endeavouring to redreſs.

Ibid. Of all the Cauſes, etc.] The firſt cauſe of wrong Judgment is PRIDE. He judiciouſly begins with it, [from v. 200 to 215] as on other accounts, ſo on this, that it is the very thing which gives modern Criticiſm its character; whoſe complexion is abuſe and cenſure. He calls it the vice of Fools; by whom are not meant thoſe to whom Nature has given no Judgment (for he is here ſpeaking of what miſleads the Judgment) but thoſe in whom education and ſtudy has made no improvement; as appears from the happy ſimilitude of an ill nouriſh'd body; where the ſame words which expreſs the cauſe, expreſs likewiſe the nature of pride:

For as in bodies, thus in ſouls, we find,
What wants in blood and ſpirits, ſwell'd with wind.

'Tis the buſineſs of reaſon, he tells us, to diſpel the cloud which pride throws over the mind: But the miſchief is, that the rays of reaſon, diverted by ſelf-love, ſometimes gild this cloud, inſtead of diſſipating it. So that the Judgment, by falſe lights reflected back upon itſelf, is ſtill apt to be a little dazzled, and to miſtake its object. He therefore advifes to call in ſtill more helps:

Truſt not yourſelf; but your defects to know,
Make uſe of ev'ry Friend—and ev'ry Foe.

Both the beginning and concluſion of this precept are remarkable. The queſtion is of the means to ſubdue Pride: He directs the Critic to begin with a diſtruſt of himſelf; and this is Modeſty, the firſt mortification of Pride: And then to ſeek the aſſiſtance of others, and make uſe even of an Enemy; and this is Humility, the laſt mortification of Pride: For when a man can once bring himſelf to ſubmit to profit by an enemy, he has either already quite ſubdued his Vanity, or is in a fair way of ſo doing.

NOTES.

VER. 209. Pride where Wit fails ſteps in to our defence, And fills up all the mighty void of ſenſe.] A very ſenſible french writer makes the following remark on this ſpecies of pride. "Un homme qui ſçait pluſieurs "Langues, qui entend les Auteurs Grecs et Latins, "qui s'eleve même juſqu' à la dignité de SCHOLIASTE; "ſi cet homme venoit à peſer ſon véritable mérite, il "trouveroit ſouvent qu'il ſe réduit à avoir eu des yeux "et de la mémoire, il ſe garderoit bien de donner le "nom reſpectable de ſcience à une érudition ſans lumiere. Il y a une grande difference entre s'enrichir "des mots ou des choſes, entre alleguer des autoritez "ou des raiſons. Si un homme pouvoit ſe ſurprendre "à n' avoir que cette ſorte de mérite, il en rougiroit "plûtôt que d'en être vain."

If once right reaſon drives that cloud away,
Truth breaks upon us with reſiſtleſs day.
Truſt not yourſelf; but your defects to know,
Make uſe of ev'ry friend—and ev'ry foe.
A little learning is a dang'rous thing;
Drink deep, or taſte not the Pierian ſpring:
There ſhallow draughts intoxicate the brain,
And drinking largely ſobers us again.
Fir'd at firſt ſight with what the Muſe imparts,
In fearleſs youth we tempt the heights of Arts,

COMMENTARY.

VER. 215. A little learning, etc.] We muſt here remark the Poet's ſkill in his diſpoſition of the cauſes obſtructing true Judgment. Each general cauſe which is laid down firſt, has its own particular cauſe in that which follows. Thus, the ſecond cauſe of wrong Judgment, SUPERFICIAL LEARNING, is what gives birth to that critical Pride, which he mentioned firſt.

VER. 216. Drink deep, etc.] Nature and Learning are the pole ſtars of all true Criticiſm: But Pride hinders the ſight of Nature; and a ſmattering of letters takes away all ſenſe of the want of learning. To avoid this ridiculous ſituation, the poet [from v. 214 to 233] adviſes, either to drink deep, or not to taſte at all; for the leaſt ſip is enough to make a bad Critic, while even a moderate draught can never make a good one. And yet the labours and difficulties of drinking deep are ſo great that a young author, "Fir'd with ideas of fair "Italy," and ambitious to ſnatch a palm from Rome, engages in an undertaking as arduous almoſt as that of Hannibal: Finely illuſtrated by the ſimilitude of an unexperienced traveller penetrating thro' the Alps.

NOTES.

VER. 217. There ſhallow draughts, etc.] The thought was taken from Lord Verulam, who applies it to more ſerious enquiries.

While from the bounded level of our mind,
Short views we take, nor see the lengths behind;
But more advanc'd, behold with strange surprize
New distant scenes of endless science rise!
So pleas'd at first the tow'ring Alps we try,
Mount o'er the vales, and seem to tread the sky,
Th' eternal snows appear already past,
And the first clouds and mountains seem the last:
But, those attain'd, we tremble to survey
The growing labours of the lengthen'd way,
Th' increasing prospect tires our wand'ring eyes,
Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise!
A perfect Judge will read each work of Wit
With the same spirit that its author writ:

COMMENTARY.

VER. 233. A perfect Judge, etc.] The third cause of wrong Judgment is a NARROW CAPACITY; the natural and certain cause of the foregoing defect, acquiescence in superficial learning. This bounded Capacity the poet shews [from v. 232 to 384] betrays itself two ways; in the matter, and in the manner of the work criticised. In the matter by judging by parts; or by having one favorite part to a neglect of all the rest: In the manner, by confining the regard only to conceit, or language, or numbers. This is our Poet's order; and we shall follow him as it leads us; only just observing one great beauty which runs thro' this part of the poem; it is, that under each of these heads of wrong Judgment, he has intermixed excellent precepts for right. We shall take notice of them as they occur.

He exposes the folly of judging by parts very artfully, not by a direct description of that sort of Critic, but of his opposite, a perfect Judge, etc. Nor is the elegance of this conversion inferior to the art of it; for as, in poetic style, one word or figure is still put for another, in order to catch new lights from different images, and to reflect them back upon the subject in hand; so, in poetic matter, one person or thing may be advantageously employed for another, with the same elegance of representation. It is observable that our Author makes it almost the necessary consequence of judging by parts, to find fault: And this not without much discernment:

NOTES.

VER. 235. Survey the Whole, nor seek slight faults to find, Where nature moves, and rapture warms the mind;] The second line, in apologizing for those faults which the first says should be overlooked, gives the reason of the precept. For when a writer's attention is fixed on a general view of Nature, and his imagination warm'd with the contemplation of great ideas, it can hardly be but that there must be small irregularities in the disposition both of matter and style, because the avoiding these requires a coolness of recollection, which a writer so busied is not master of.

But in ſuch lays as neither ebb, nor flow,
Correctly cold, and regularly low,
That ſhunning faults, one quiet tenour keep;
We cannot blame indeed——but we may ſleep.
In Wit, as Nature, what affects our hearts
Is not th' exactneſs of peculiar parts;
'Tis not a lip, or eye, we beauty call,
But the joint force and full reſult of all.
Thus when we view ſome well-proportion'd dome,
(The world's juſt wonder, and ev'n thine, O Rome!)

Commentary.

For the ſeveral parts of a compleat Whole, when ſeen only ſingly, and known only independently, muſt always have the appearance of irregularity; often, of deformity: Becauſe the Poet's deſign being to create a reſultive beauty from the artful aſſemblage of ſeveral various parts in to one natural whole; thoſe parts muſt be faſhioned with regard to their mutual relations in the ſtations they occupy in that whole, from whence, the beauty required is to ariſe: But that regard will occaſion ſo unreducible a form in each part, when conſidered ſingly, as to preſent a very mis-ſhapen appearance.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 253. Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see,] He shews next [from v. 252 to 263] that to fix our censure on single parts tho' they happen to want an exactness consistent enough with their relation to the rest, is even then very unjust: And for these reasons, 1. Because it implies an expectation of a faultless piece, which is a vain imagination: 2. Because no more is to be expected of any work than that it fairly attains its end: But the end may be attained, and yet these trivial faults committed: Therefore, in spight of such faults, the work will merit the praise due to that which attains its end. 3. Because sometimes a great beauty is not to be procured, nor a notorious blemish to be avoided, but by suffering one of these minute and trivial errors. 4. And lastly, because the generous neglect of them is this mistake of the Architectonic art in general; that the excellency of it consisted in raising the greatest weight on the least assignable support, so that the edifice should have strength without the appearance of it, in order to excite admiration. But to a judicious eye it would have a contrary effect, the Appearance (as our poet expresses it) of a monstrous height, or breadth, or length. Indeed did the just proportions in regular Architecture take off from the grandeur of a building, by all the single parts coming united to the eye, as this learned traveller seems to insinuate, it would be a reasonable objection to those rules on which this Master piece of Art was constructed. But it is not so. The Poet tells us,

The Whole at once is BOLD and regular.

In ev'ry work regard the writer's End,
Since none can compaſs more than they intend;
And if the means be juſt, the conduct true,

VER. 263. Moſt Critics, fond of ſome ſubſervient art, etc.] II. The ſecond way in which a narrow capacity, as it relates to the matter, ſhews itſelf, is judging by a favorite Part. The author has placed this [from v. 262 to 285] after the other of judging by parts, with great propriety, it being indeed a natural conſequence of it For when men have once left the whole to turn their attention to the ſeparate parts, that regard and reverence due only to a whole is fondly transferred to one or other of its parts. And thus we ſee that Heroes themſelves as well as Heromakers, even Kings as well as Poets and Critics, when they chance never to have had, or long to have loſt the idea of that which is the only legitimate object of their office, the care and conſervation of the whole, are wont to devote themſelves to the ſervice of ſome favourite part, whether it be love of money, military glory, deſpotic power, etc. And all, as our Author ſays on this occaſion, to one low'd Tolly ſacrifice.

NOTES.

VER. 261. verbal Critic] Is not here uſed in its common ſignification, of one who retails the ſenſe of ſingle words; but of one who deals in large cargo's of them without any ſenſe at all.

They talk of principles, but notions prize,
And all to one lov'd Folly ſacrifice.

Once on a time, La Mancha's Knight, they ſay,
A certain Bard encount'ring on the way,
Diſcours'd in terms as juſt, with looks as ſage,
As e'er could Dennis, of the Grecian ſtage;
Concluding all were deſp'rate ſots and fools,
Who durſt depart from Ariſtotle's rules.

Commentary.

This general miſconduct much recommends that maxim in good Poetry and Politics, to give a principal attention to the whole; a maxim which our author has elſewhere ſhewn to be equally true likewiſe in Morals and Religion; as being founded in the order of things: For, if we examine, we ſhall find it ariſe from this imbecillity of our nature, that the mind muſt always have ſomething to reſt upon, to which the paſſions and affections may be intereſtingly directed. Nature prompts us to ſeek it in the moſt worthy object; and common ſenſe points out to a Whole or Syſtem: But Ignorance, and the falſe lights of the Paſſions, confound and dazzle us; we ſtop ſhort, and before we get to a Whole, take up with ſome Part; which from thence becomes our Favourite.

Notes.

Ver. 267. Once on a time, etc.] This tale is ſo very appoſite, that one would naturally take it to be of the Poet's own invention; and ſo much in the ſpirit of Cervantes, that one might eaſily miſtake it for one of the chief ſtrokes of that incomparable Satire. But, in truth, it is neither this nor that; but a ſtory taken by our Author from the ſpurious Don Quixote; which ſhews how proper an uſe may be made of General reading, when if there is but one good thing in a book (as in that wretched performance there ſcarce was more) it may be pick'd out, and employ'd to an excellent purpoſe.

Our Author, happy in a judge so nice,
Produc'd his Play, and begg'd the Knight's advice;
Made him observe the subject, and the plot,
The manners, passions, unities; what not?
All which, exact to rule, were brought about,
Were but a combat in the lists left out.
"What! leave the Combat out?" exclaims the Knight;
Yes, or we must renounce the Stagirite.
"Not so by Heav'n" (he answers in a rage)
"Knights, squires, and steeds, must enter on the stage."
So vast a throng the stage can ne'er contain.
"Then build a new, or act it in a plain."

He concludes his observations on those two sorts of judges by parts, with this general reflexion.—The curious not knowing are the first sort, who judge by parts, and with a microscopic sight (as he says elsewhere) examine bit by bit: The not exact but nice, are the second, who judge by a favourite part, and talk of a whole to cover their fondness for a part; as Philosophers do of

Notes.

Ver. 285. Thus Critics of less judgment than caprice, Curious not knowing, not exact but nice.] In these two lines the poet finely describes the way in which bad writers are wont to imitate the qualities of good ones. As true Judgment generally draws men out of popular opinions, so he who cannot get from the croud by the assistance of this guide, willingly follows Caprice, which will be sure to lead him into singularities. Again, true Knowledge is the art of treasuring up only that which, from its use in life, is worthy of being lodged in the principles, in order to obtrude their notions or opinions for them. But the fate common to both is, to be governed by caprice and not by Judgment, and conſequently, to form ſhort ideas, or to have ideas ſhort of truth: Tho' the latter ſort, thro' a fondneſs to their favorite part, imagine that they comprehend the whole in epitome: As the famous Hero of La Mancha, mentioned juſt before, uſed to maintain, that Knight Errantry compriſed within itſelf the quinteſſence of all Science, civil and military.

VER. 289. Some to Conceit alone, etc.] We come now to that ſecond ſort of bounded capacity, which betrays itſelf in the manner of the work criticiſed. And this our Author proſecutes from v. 288 to 384. Theſe are again ſubdivided into divers claſſes.

Ibid. Some to Conceit alone, etc.] The firſt [from v. 288 to 305] are thoſe who confine their attention ſolely to Conceit or Wit. And here again the Critic by parts, offends doubly in the manner, juſt as he did in the matter: For he not only confines his attention to a part, when it ſhould be extended to the whole; but he likewiſe judges falſely of that part. And this, like the other, is unavoidable, as the parts in the manner, bear the ſame cloſe relation to the whole, that the parts in the matter do; to which whole the ideas of this Critic have never yet extended. Hence it is, that our author, speaking here of those who confine their attention solely to Conceit or Wit, describes the two species of true and false Wit; because they not only mistake a wrong disposition of true Wit for a right, but likewise false Wit for true: He describes false Wit first, from v. 288 to 297.

Some to Conceit alone, etc.

Where the reader may observe our Author's skill in representing, in a description of false Wit, the false disposition of the true, as the Critic by parts is apt to fall into both these errors.

He next describes true Wit, from 296 to 305.

True Wit is Nature to advantage dress'd, etc.

And here again the reader may observe the same beauty, not only an explanation of true Wit, but likewise of the right disposition of it; which the poet illustrates, as he did the wrong, by ideas taken from the art of Painting.

NOTES.

VER. 297. True Wit is Nature to advantage dress'd, etc.] This definition is very exact. Mr. Locke had defined Wit to consist in the assemblage of ideas, and putting those together, with quickness and variety, wherein can be found any resemblance or congruity, whereby to make up pleasant pictures and agreeable visions in the fancy. But that great Philopher, in separating Wit from Judgment, as he does in this place, has given us (and he could therefore give us no other) only an account of Something, whoſe truth convinc'd at ſight we find,

That gives us back the image of our mind.
As ſhades more ſweetly recommend the light,

A ſtriking Image therefore of Nature is, as Mr. Locke obſerves, certainly Wit: But this image may ſtrike on ſeveral other accounts, as well as for its truth and amiableneſs; and the Philoſopher has explained the manner how. But it never becomes that Wit which is the ornament of true Poeſy, whoſe end is to repreſent Nature, but when it dreſſes that Nature to advantage, and preſents her to us in the cleareſt and moſt amiable light. And to know when the Fancy has done its office truly, the poet ſubjoins this admirable Teſt, viz. When we perceive that it gives us back the image of our mind. When it does that, we may be ſure it plays no tricks with us: For this image is the creature of the Judgment; and whenever Wit correſponds with Judgment, we may ſafely pronounce it to be true.

do but to gild over the defect, by giving his words all the falſe colouring in his power.

2. He ſhews, that the Critic who buſies himſelf with this quality alone, is altogether unable to make a right Judgment of it; becauſe true Expreſſion is only the dreſs of Thought; and ſo muſt be perpetually varied according to the ſubject, and manner of thinking. But thoſe who never concern themſelves with the Senſe, can form no judgment of the correſpondence between that and the Language:

Expreſſion is the dreſs of thought, and ſtill
Appears more decent as more ſuitable, etc.

Now as theſe Critics are ignorant of this correſpondence, their whole judgment in Language is reduced to the examination of ſingle words; of which, ſuch as are to his taſte, are ſo only in proportion as they ſmack of Antiquity: On which our author has therefore beſtowed a little raillery; concluding with a ſhort and proper direction concerning the uſe of words, ſo far as regards their novelty and ancientry.

NOTES.

VER. 311. Falſe eloquence, like the priſmatic glaſs, etc.] This ſimile is beautiful. For the falſe colouring, given to objects by the priſmatic glaſs, is owing to its untwiſting, by its obliquities, thoſe threads of light, which Nature had put together in order to ſpread over its works an ingenuous and ſimple candor, that ſhould not hide, but only heighten the native complexion of the objects. And falſe Eloquence is nothing elſe but the ſtraining and divaricating the parts of true expreſſion;

The face of Nature we no more ſurvey,
All glares alike, without diſtinction gay:
But true Expreſſion, like th' unchanging ſun,
Clears, and improves whate'er it ſhines upon,
It gilds all objects, but it alters none.
Expreſſion is the dreſs of thought, and ſtill
Appears more decent, as more ſuitable;
A vile conceit in pompous words expreſs'd,
Is like a clown in regal purple dreſs'd:
For diff'rent ſtyles with diff'rent ſubjects ſort,
As ſeveral garbs with country, town, and court.
Some by old words to fame have made pretence,
Ancients in phraſe, mere moderns in their ſenſe;
Such labour'd nothings, in ſo ſtrange a ſtyle,
Amaze th' unlearn'd, and make the learned ſmile.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 337. But most by Numbers judge, etc.] The last sort are those [from v. 336 to 384.] whose ears are attached only to the Harmony of a poem. Of which they judge as ignorantly and as perversely as the other sort did of Eloquence; and for the very same reason. He first describes that false Harmony with which they are so much captivated; and shews, that it is wretchedly flat and unvaried: For Smooth or rough with them is right or wrong.

He then describes the true. 1. As it is in itself, constant; with a happy mixture of strength and sweetness, in contradiction to the roughness and flatness of false Harmony: And 2. as it is varied, in compliance to the subject, where the sound becomes an echo to the sense, so far as is consistent with the preservation of numbers; in contradiction to the monotony of false Harmony: Of this he gives us, in the delivery of his precepts, four fine examples of smoothness, roughness, slowness, and rapidity. The first use of this correspondence of the sound to the sense, is to aid the fancy in acquiring a perfecter and more lively image of the thing represented. A second and nobler, is to calm and subdue the turbulent and selfish passions, and to raise and warm the

VER. 364. 'Tis not enough no harſhneſs gives offence; The ſound muſt ſeem an Echo to the ſenſe:] The judicious introduction of this precept is remarkable. The Poets, and even ſome of the beſt of them, have been ſo fond of the beauty ariſing from this trivial precept, that, in their practice, they have violated the very End of it, which is the encreaſe of harmony; and, ſo they could but raiſe an Echo, did not care whoſe ears they offended by its diſſonance. To remedy this abuſe therefore, the poet, whom by the introductory line, would inſinuate, that Harmony is always preſuppoſed as obſerved; tho' it may and ought to be perpetually varied, ſo as to produce the effect here recommended.

unlearned readers he is here ſpeaking of, he expoſes their folly in a very appoſite ſimilitude:

Thus Wit, like Faith, by each Man is apply'd
To one ſmall ſect, and all are damn'd beſide.

But he ſhews [from v. 397 to 408] that theſe Critics have as wrong a notion of Reaſon as thoſe Bigots have of God: For that Genius is not confined to times or climates; but, as the common gift of Nature, is extended throughout all ages and countries: That indeed this intellectual light, like the material light of the Sun itſelf, may not ſhine at all times, in every place, with equal ſplendor; but be ſometimes clouded with popular ignorance; and ſometimes again eclipſed by the diſcountenance of Princes; yet it ſhall ſtill recover itſelf; and, by breaking thro' the ſtrongeſt of theſe impediments, manifeſt the eternity of its nature.

VER. 402. Which from the firſt etc.] Genius is the ſame in all ages; but its fruits are various; and more or leſs excellent as they are checked or matured by the influence of Government or Religion upon them. Hence in ſome parts of Literature the Ancients excell; in others, the moderns: juſt as thoſe accidental circumſtances influenced them.

Regard not then if Wit be old or new,
But blame the falſe, and value ſtill the true.
Some ne'er advance a Judgment of their own,
But catch the ſpreading notion of the Town;
They reaſon and conclude by precedent,
And own ſtale nonſenſe which they ne'er invent.

How the wit brightens! how the ſtyle refines!
Before his ſacred name flies ev'ry fault,
And each exalted ſtanza teems with thought!

COMMENTARY.

VER. 408. Some ne'er advance a Judgment of their own] A ſecond inſtance of unlearned partiality, he ſhews [from v. 407 to 424.] is mens going always along with the cry, as having no fixed or well grounded principles whereon to raiſe any judgment of their own. A third is reverence for names; of which ſort, as he well obſerves, the worſt and vileſt are the idolizers of names of quality; whom therefore he ſtigmatizes as they deſerve. Our author's temper as well as judgment is here very obſervable in throwing this ſpecies of partiality amongſt the unlearned Critics: His affection for letters would not ſuffer him to conceive, that any learned Critic could ever fall to ſo low a proſtitution.

The Vulgar thus through Imitation err;
As oft the Learn'd by being ſingular;
So much they ſcorn the crowd, that if the throng
By chance go right, they purpoſely go wrong:

COMMENTARY.

VER. 424.—The Vulgar thus—As oft the Learn'd—] II. He comes, in the ſecond place [from v. 423 to 452] to conſider the inſtances of partiality in the learned. 1. The firſt is Singularity. For, as want of Principles, in the unlearned, neceſſitates them to reſt on the general judgment as always right; ſo adherence to falſe principles (that is, to notions of their own) miſleads the learned into the other extreme, of ſuppoſing the general judgment always wrong. And as, before, the Poet compared thoſe to Bigots, who made true faith to conſiſt in believing after others; ſo he compares theſe to Schiſmaticks, who make it to conſiſt in believing as no one ever believed before. Which folly he marks with a lively ſtroke of humour in the turn of the thought:

So Schiſmatics the plain believers quit,
And are but damn'd for having too much Wit.

2. The ſecond is Novelty. And as this proceeds ſometimes from fondneſs, ſometimes from vanity; he compares the one to the paſſion for a miſtreſs; and the other, to the pride of being in faſhion: But the excuſe common to both is, the daily improvement of their Judgment.

Aſk them the cauſe, they're wiſer ſtill they ſay.

Now as this is a plauſible pretence for their inconſtancy; and our author has himſelf afterwards laid down the like thought, in a precept for a remedy againſt obſtinacy and pride, where he ſays, v. 570.

But you with pleaſure own your errors paſt,
And make each day a critic on the laſt,

he has been careful, by the turn of the expreſſion in this place to ſhew the difference. For Time, conſidered only as duration, vitiates as frequently as it improves: Therefore to expect wiſdom as the neceſſary attendant of length of years, unrelated to long experience, is vain

So Schiſmatics the plain believers quit,
And are but damn'd for having too much wit.
Some praiſe at morning what they blame at night;
But always think the laſt opinion right.
A Muſe by theſe is like a miſtreſs us'd,

And ſtill to-morrow's wiſer than to-day.

Our wiſer ſons, no doubt, will think us ſo.
Once Shool-divines this zealous iſle o'er-ſpread;

and deluſive. This he illuſtrates by a remarkable example; where we ſee Time, inſtead of becoming wiſer, deſtroying good letters, to ſubſtitute ſchool divinity in their place.—The genius of which kind of learning; the character of its profeſſors; and the fate, which, ſooner or later, always attends whatſoever is wrong or falſe, the poet ſums up in thoſe four lines;

Faith, Goſpel, all ſeem'd made to be diſputed, etc.

And in concluſion, he obſerves, that perhaps this miſchief, from love of novelty, might not be ſo great, did it not, with the Critic, infect Writers likewiſe; who, when they find their readers diſpoſed to take ready Wit on the ſtandard of current Folly, never trouble themſelves to make better payment.

Yet (as Mr. Pope ſays of Luke Milbourn) the faireſt of all critics; for having written againſt the Editor's remarks on Shakeſpear, he did him juſtice in printing at the ſame time his own.

VER. 468. For envy'd Wit, like Sol eclips'd, etc.] This ſimilitude implies a fact too often verified; and of which we need not ſeek abroad for examples. It is, that frequently thoſe very Authors, who have at firſt done all they could to obſcure and depreſs a riſing genius, have at length, in order to keep themſelves in ſome little credit, been reduced to borrow from him, imitate his manner, and reflect what they could of his ſplendor. Nor hath the poet been leſs artful, to inſinuate alſo what is ſometimes the cauſe. A youthful genius, like the Sun riſing towards the Meridian, diſplays too ſtrong and powerful beams for the dirty genius of inferior writers, which occaſions their gathering, condenſing, and blackening. But as he deſcends from the Meridian (the time when the Sun gives its gilding to the ſurrounding clouds) his rays grow milder, his heat more benign, and then

Be thou the firſt true merit to befriend;
His praiſe is loſt, who ſtays 'till all commend.
Short is the date, alas, of modern rhymes,
And 'tis but juſt to let them live betimes.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 474. Be thou the firſt etc.] The poet having now gone thro' the laſt cauſe of wrong Judgment, and root of all the reſt, PARTIALITY; and ended it with the higheſt inſtances of it, in party-rage and envy; this affords him an opportunity [from v. 473 to 560] of cloſing his ſecond diviſion in the moſt graceful manner, by concluding from the premiſſes, and calling upon the TRUE CRITIC to be careful of his charge, which is the protection and ſupport of Wit. For, the defence of it from malevolent cenſure is its true protection; and the illuſtration of its beauties, its true ſupport.

He firſt ſhews, the Critic ought to do this ſervice without delay; And on theſe motives. 1. Out of regard to himſelf: For there is ſome merit in giving the world notice of an excellence; but none at all in pointing, like an Idiot, to that which has been long in the admiration of men. 2. Out of regard to the Poem: For the ſhort duration of modern works requires they ſhould begin to enjoy their exiſtence early. He compares the life of modern Wit, and of the ancient, which ſurvives in an univerſal language, to the difference between the Patriarchal age and our own: And obſerves, that while the ancient writings live for ever, as it were in braſs and marble, the modern are but like Paintings, which, of how maſterly a hand ſoever, have no ſooner gained their requiſite perfection by the incorporating, ſoftening, and ripening of their tints, which they do in a very few years, but they begin to fade and die away. 3. Laſtly, our author ſhews, that the Critic ought to do this ſervice out of regard to the Poet; when he conſiders the ſlender dowry the Muſe brings along with her: In youth 'tis only a ſhort lived vanity; and in maturer years an acceſſion of care and labour, in proportion to the

NOTES.

VER. 484. So when the faithful pencil, etc.] This ſimilitude, in which the poet diſcovers (as he always does on this ſubject) real ſcience in the thing ſpoken of, has ſtill a more peculiar beauty, as at the ſame time that it confeſſes the juſt ſuperiority of antient writings, it inſinuates one advantage the modern have above them; which is this, that in theſe, our intimate acquaintance with the occaſion of writing, and the manners deſcribed, lets us into all thoſe living and ſtriking graces which may be well compared to that perfection of imitation only given by colouring: While the ravage of Time amongſt the monuments of former ages, hath left us but the groſs ſubſtance of ancient wit, ſo much of the form and matter of body only as may be expreſſed in braſs or marble.

When mellowing years their full perfection give,
And each bold figure juſt begins to live,

Then moſt our trouble ſtill when moſt admir'd,
And ſtill the more we give, the more requir'd;
Whoſe fame with pains we guard, but loſe with eaſe,
Sure ſome to vex, but never all to pleaſe;
'Tis what the vicious fear, the virtuous ſhun,
By fools 'tis hated, and by knaves undone!
If Wit ſo much from Ign'rance undergo,

VER. 527. But if in noble minds ſome dregs remain, etc.] So far as to what ought to be the true Critic's principal ſtudy and employment. But if the ſour critical humour muſt needs have vent, he points to its right object; and ſhews [from v. 526 to 596.] how it may be uſefull and innocently diverted. This is very obſervable; for our author makes ſpleen and diſdain the characteriſtic of the falſe Critic, and yet here ſuppoſes them inherent in the true. But it is done with judgment, and a knowledge of nature. For as bitterneſs and acerbity in unripe fruits of the beſt kind are the foundation and capacity of that high ſpirit, race, and flavour which we find in them, when perfectly concocted by the heat and influence of the Sun; and which, without thoſe qualities, would often gain no more by that influence than only a mellow inſipidity: ſo ſpleen and diſdain in the true Critic, improved by long ſtudy and experience, ripen into an exactneſs of Judgment and an elegance of Taſte: But, lying in the falſe Critic remote from the influence of good letters, continue in all their firſt offenſive harſhneſs and aſtringency. The Poet therefore ſhews how, after the exaltation of theſe qualities into their ſtate of perfection, the very Dregs (which, tho' precipitated, may poſſibly, on ſome occaſions, riſe and ferment even in a noble mind) may be uſefully employed in branding OBSCENITY and

In the fat age of pleasure wealth and ease,
Sprung the rank weed, and thriv'd with large encrease:
When love was all an easy Monarch's care;
Seldom at council, never in a war:
Jilts rul'd the state, and statesmen farces writ;
Nay wits had pensions, and young Lords had wit:

COMMENTARY.

IMPIETY. Of these he explains the rise and progress, in a beautiful picture of the different genius's of the reigns of Charles II. and William III. the former of which gave course to the most profligate luxury; the latter to a licentious impiety. These are the criminals the poet assigns over to the caustic hand of the Critic, but concludes however, from v. 556 to 561. with this necessary admonition, to take care not to be misled into unjust censure; either on the one hand, by a pharisaical niceness, or on the other by a consciousness of guilt. And thus the second division of his Essay ends: The judicious conduct of which is worthy our observation. The subject of it are the causes of wrong Judgment: These he derives upwards from cause to cause, till he brings them to their source, an immoral partiality: For as he had, in the first part,

trac'd the Muses upward to their spring, and shewn them to be derived from Heaven, and the Offspring of virtue; so hath he here pursued this enemy of the Muses, the bad Critic, to his low original, in the arms of his nursing mother Immorality. This order naturally introduces, and at the same time shews the necessity of, the subject of the third and last division, which is, on the Morals of the Critic.

The Fair ſate panting at a Courtier's play,
And not a Maſk went unimprov'd away:
The modeſt fan was lifted up no more,
And Virgins ſmil'd at what they bluſh'd before.
The following licence of a Foreign reign
Did all the dregs of bold Socinus drain;
Then unbelieving Prieſts reform'd the nation,
And taught more pleaſant methods of ſalvation;
Where Heav'n's free ſubjects might their rights diſpute,
Leſt God himſelf ſhould ſeem too abſolute:
Pulpits their ſacred ſatire learn'd to ſpare,
And Vice admir'd to find a flatt'rer there!
Encourag'd thus, Wit's Titans brav'd the ſkies,
And the preſs groan'd with licens'd blaſphemies.
Theſe monſters, Critics! with your darts engage,
Here point your thunder, and exhauſt your rage!

NOTES.

VER. 546. Did all the dregs of bold Socinus drain;] The ſeeds of this religious evil, as well as of the political that encouraged it (for all Revolutions are in themſelves evils, tho' brought about thro' neceſſity, for the removal of greater) were ſown in the preceding fat age of pleaſure. The miſchiefs done, during Cromwell's uſurpation, by fanaticiſm, inflamed by erroneous and abſurd notions of the doctrine of grace and ſatisfaction, made the loyal Latitudinarian divines (as they were called) at the Reſtoration, go ſo far into the other extreme of reſolving all Chriſtianity into Morality, as to afford an eaſy introduction to Socinianiſm: Which in that reign (founded on the principles of Liberty) men had full opportunity of propagating.

VER. 547. The author has omitted two linesw hich ſtood here, as containing a National Reflection, which in his ſtricter judgment he could not but diſapprove on any People whatever. P.

Yet ſhun their fault, who, ſcandalouſly nice,
Will needs miſtake an author into vice;
All ſeems infected that th' infected ſpy,
As all looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye.

LEARN then what MORALS Critics ought to ſhow,
For 'tis but half a Judge's taſk, to know.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 561. Learn then etc.] We enter now on the third part, the MORALS of the Critic; included in CANDOUR, MODESTY, and GOOD-BREEDING. This third and laſt part is in two diviſions. In the firſt of which [from v. 560 to 632.] he inculcates theſe morals by precept: In the ſecond [from v. 631 to the end] by example. His firſt precept [from v. 562 to 567.] recommends CANDOUR, for its uſe to the Critic, and to the writer criticiſed.

2. The ſecond [from v. 566 to 573.] recommends MODESTY, which manifeſts itſelf by theſe four ſigns:

1. Silence where it doubts,
Be ſilent always when you doubt your ſenſe;
2. A ſeeming diffidence where it knows,
And ſpeak, tho' ſure, with ſeeming diffidence:
3. A free confeſſion of error where wrong,
But you with pleaſure own your errors paſt,
4. And a conſtant review and ſcrutiny even of thoſe opinions which it ſtill thinks right:
And make each day a Critic on the laſt.

3 The third [from v. 572 to 585.] recommends GOOD BREEDING, which will not force truth dogmatically upon men, as ignorant of it, but gently inſinuates it into them, as not ſufficiently attentive to it. But as men of breeding are apt to fall into two extremes, he

NOTES.

VER. 562. For 'tis but half a Judge's taſk, to know.] The Critic acts in two capacities, of Aſſeſſor and of Judge: in the firſt, ſcience alone is ſufficient; but the other requires morals likewiſe.

'Tis not enough, taſte, judgment, learning, join;
In all you ſpeak, let truth and candour ſhine:
That not alone what to your ſenſe is due
All may allow; but ſeek your friendſhip too.
Be ſilent always when you doubt your ſenſe;
And ſpeak, tho' ſure, with ſeeming diffidence:
Some poſitive, perſiſting fops we know,
Who, if once wrong, will needs be always ſo;
But you, with pleaſure own your errors paſt,
And make each day a Critic on the laſt.
'Tis not enough, your counſel ſtill be true;
Blunt truths more miſchief than nice falſhoods do;
Men muſt be taught as if you taught them not,
And things unknown propos'd as things forgot.
Without Good Breeding, truth is diſapprov'd;
That only makes ſuperior ſenſe belov'd.
Be niggards of advice on no pretence;
For the worſt avarice is that of ſenſe.
With mean complacence ne'er betray your truſt,
Nor be ſo civil as to prove unjuſt.
Fear not the anger of the wiſe to raiſe;
Thoſe beſt can bear reproof, who merit praiſe.
'Twere well might Critics ſtill this freedom take,
But Appius reddens at each word you ſpeak, prudently cautions againſt them. The one is a backwardneſs in communicating their knowledge, out of a falſe delicacy, and fear of being thought Pedants: The other, and much more common extreme in men of breeding, is a mean complacence, which ſuch as are worthy of your advice do not want to make it acceptable; for thoſe can beſt bear reproof in particular points, who beſt deſerve commendation in general.

VER. 585. 'Twere well might Critics, etc.] The poet having thus recommended, in theſe general rules

Like ſome fierce Tyrant in old tapeſtry.
Fear moſt to tax an honourable fool,
Whoſe right it is, uncenſur'd to be dull; 59*

As without learning they can take Degrees.

of Conduct for the Judgment, the three critical Virtues to the heart; ſhews next [from v. 584 to 632] on what three ſort of Writers theſe Virtues, together with the adviſe conveyed under them, would be thrown away; and, which is worſe, be repaid with obloquy and ſlander. Theſe are the falſe Critic, the dull Man of Quality, and the bad Poet; each of which incorrigible writers he hath very juſtly and exactly characterized.

But having drawn the laſt of them at large, and being always attentive to his main ſubject, which is, of writing and judging well, he re-aſſumes the character of the bad Critic (whom he had but touched upon before) to contraſt him with the other; and makes the Characteriſtic common to both, to be a never-ceaſing Repetition of their own impertinence.

The Poet,—ſtill runs on in a raging vein, etc. v. 607, etc.

The Critic—with his own tongue ſtill edifies his ears, v. 615, etc.

NOTES.

VER. 587. And ſtares, tremendous, etc.] This picture was taken to himſelf by John Dennis, a furious old Critic by profeſſion, who, upon no other provocation, wrote againſt this Eſſay and its author, in a manner perfectly lunatic: For, as to the mention made of him in v. 270, he took it as a Compliment, and ſaid it was treacherouſly meant to cauſe him to overlook this Abuſe of his Perſon. P.

Whom, when they praiſe, the world believes no more,
Than when they promiſe to give ſcribling o'er.
'Tis beſt ſometimes your cenſure to reſtrain,
And charitably let the dull be vain:
Your ſilence there is better than your ſpite,
For who can rail ſo long as they can write?
Still humming on, their drouzy courſe they keep,
And laſh'd ſo long, like tops, are laſh'd aſleep.
Falſe ſteps but help them to renew the race,
As, after ſtumbling, Jades will mend their pace.
What crouds of theſe, impenitently bold,
In ſounds and jingling ſyllables grown old,
Still run on Poets, in a raging vein,
Ev'n to the dregs and ſqueezings of the brain,
Strain out the laſt dull droppings of their ſenſe,
And rhyme with all the rage of Impotence.

Such ſhameleſs Bards we have; and yet 'tis true,
There are as mad abandon'd Critics too.
The bookful blockhead, ignorantly read,
With loads of learned lumber in his head,
With his own tongue ſtill edifies his ears,
And always liſt'ning to himſelf appears.
All books he reads, and all he reads aſſails,
From Dryden's Fables down to Durfey's Tales.
With him, moſt authors ſteal their works, or buy;
Garth did not write his own Diſpenſary.
Name a new Play, and he's the Poet's friend,
Nay ſhow'd his faults—but when would Poets mend?

NOTES.

VER. 620. Garth did not write etc.] A common ſlander at that time in prejudice of that deſerving author. Our poet did him this juſtice, when that ſlander moſt prevail'd; and it is now (perhaps the ſooner for this very verſe) dead and forgotten. P.

No place ſo ſacred from ſuch fops is barr'd,
Nor is Paul's church more ſafe than Paul's church yard:
Nay, fly to Altars; there they'll talk you dead:
For Fools ruſh in where Angels fear to tread.
Diſtruſtful ſenſe with modeſt caution ſpeaks,
It ſtill looks home, and ſhort excurſions makes;
But rattling nonſenſe in full vollies breaks,
And never ſhock'd, and never turn'd aſide,
Burſts out, reſiſtleſs, with a thund'ring tide.

But where's the man, who counſel can beſtow,
Still pleas'd to teach, and yet not proud to know?

VARIATIONS.

VER. 624. Between this and v. 625.

In vain you ſhrug and ſweat, and ſtrive to fly;
Theſe know no Manners but of Poetry.
They'll ſtop a hungry Chaplain in his grace,
To treat of Unities of time and place.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 631. But where's the man, etc] II. The ſecond diviſion of this laſt part, which we now come to, is of the Morals of Critics by example. For, having there drawn a picture of the falſe Critic, at large, he breaks out into an apoſtrophe, containing an exact and finiſh-

NOTES.

VER. 632. But where's the man, etc.] The Poet, by his manner of aſking after this Character, and telling us, when he had deſcribed it, that ſuch once were Critics, does not encourage us to ſearch for it in modern writers. And indeed the diſcovery of him, if it could be made, would be but an invidious buſineſs. I will venture no farther than to name the piece of Criticiſm in which theſe marks may be found. It is intitled, Q. Hor. Fl. Ars Poetica, with an Engliſh Commentary and Notes.

Unbiaſs'd, or by favour, or by ſpite;
Not dully prepoſſeſs'd, nor blindly right;
Tho' learn'd, well-bred; and tho' well-bred, ſincere,
Modeſtly bold, and humanly ſevere:
Who to a friend his faults can freely ſhow,
And gladly praiſe the merit of a foe?
Bleſt with a taſte exact, yet unconfin'd;
A knowledge both of books and human kind:
Gen'rous converſe; a ſoul exempt from pride;
And love to praiſe, with reaſon on his ſide?

COMMENTARY.

ed character of the true, which, at the ſame time, ſerves for an eaſy and proper introduction to this ſecond diviſion. For, having aſked [from v. 631 to 644.] Where's the man, etc. he anſwers [from v. 643 to 682.] That he was to be found in the happier ages of Greece and Rome; in the perſons of Ariſtotle and Horace, Dionyſius and Petronius, Quintilian and Longinus. Whoſe features he has not only exactly delineated, but contraſted with a peculiar elegance; the profound ſcience and logical method of Ariſtotle being oppoſed to the plain common ſenſe of Horace, conveyed in a natural and familiar negligence; the ſtudy and refinement of Dionyſius, to the gay and courtly eaſe of Petronius; and the gravity and minuteneſs of Quintilian, to the vivacity and general topics of Longinus. Nor has the poet been leſs careful, in theſe examples to point out their eminence in the ſeveral critical Virtues he ſo carefully inculcated in his precepts Thus in Horace he particularizes his Candour, in Petronius his Good Breeding, in Quintilian his free and copious Inſtruction, and in Longinus his noble Spirit.

NOTES.

VER. 643. with REASON on his ſide?] Not only on his ſide, but actually exerciſed in his ſervice. That Critic makes but a mean figure, who, when he has found out the excellencies of his author, contents him-

Such once were Critics; ſuch the happy few,
Athens and Rome in better ages knew.
The mighty Stagirite firſt left the ſhore,
Spread all his ſails, and durſt the deeps explore:
He ſteer'd ſecurely, and diſcover'd far,
Led by the light of the Mæonian Star.
Poets, a race long unconfin'd, and free,
Still fond and proud of ſavage liberty,
Receiv'd his laws; and ſtood convinc'd 'twas fit,
Who conquer'd Nature, ſhould preſide o'er Wit.

VARIATIONS.

Between v. 647 and 648, I found the following lines, ſince ſuppreſt by the author:

That bold Columbus of the realms of wit,
Whoſe firſt diſcov'ry's not exceeded yet.
Led by the light of the Mæonian Star,
He ſteer'd ſecurely, and diſcover'd far.
He, when all Nature was ſubdu'd before,
Like his great Pupil, ſigh'd, and long'd for more:
Fancy's wild regions yet unvanquiſh'd lay,
A boundleſs empire, and that own'd no ſway.
Poets, etc.

NOTES.

ſelf in offering them to the world, with only empty exclamations on their beauties. His office is to explain the nature of thoſe beauties, ſhew from whence they ariſe, and what effects they produce; or, in the better and fuller expreſſion of the Poet,

To teach the world with reaſon to admire.

VER. 653. Who conquer'd Nature, ſhould preſide o'er Wit.] By this is not meant phyſical Nature, but moral. The force of the obſervation conſiſts in our underſtanding it in this ſenſe. For the Poet not only uſes the word Nature for human nature, throughout this poem; but alſo, where, in the beginning of it, he lays down the principles of the arts he treats of, he makes the know-

Horace ſtill charms with graceful negligence,
And without method talks us into ſenſe,
Will, like a friend, familiarly convey
The trueſt notions in the eaſieſt way.
He, who ſupreme in judgment, as in wit,
Might boldly cenſure, as he boldly writ,
Yet judg'd with coolneſs, tho' he ſung with fire;
His Precepts teach but what his works inſpire.
Our Critics take a contrary extreme,
They judge with fury, but they write with fle'me:
Nor ſuffers Horace more in wrong Tranſlations
By Wits, than Critics in as wrong Quotations.
See Dionyſius Homer's thoughts refine,
And call new beauties forth from ev'ry line!
Fancy and art in gay Petronius pleaſe,
The ſcholar's learning, with the courtier's eaſe.
In grave Quintilian's copious work, we find
The juſteſt rules, and cleareſt method join'd:
Thus uſeful arms in magazines we place,
All rang'd in order, and diſpos'd with grace,
But leſs to pleaſe the eye, than arm the hand,
Still fit for uſe, and ready at command.

NOTES.

ledge of human nature the foundation of all Criticiſm and Poetry. Nor is the obſervation leſs true than appoſite. For, Ariſtotle's natural enquiries were ſuperficial, and ill made, tho' extenſive: But his logical and moral works are incomparable. In theſe he has unfolded the human mind, and laid open all the receſſes of the heart and underſtanding; and by his Categories, not only conquered Nature, but kept her in tenfold chains: Not as Dulneſs kept the Muſes, in the Dunciad, to ſilence them; but as Ariſtæus held Proteus in Virgil, to deliver Oracles.

VER. 666. See Dyonyſius] Of Halicarnaſſus. P.

Thee, bold Longinus! all the Nine inſpire,
And bleſs their Critic with a Poet's fire.
An ardent Judge, who zealous in his truſt,
With warmth gives ſentence, yet is always juſt;
Whoſe own example ſtrengthens all his laws;
And is himſelf that great Sublime he draws.

Thus long ſucceeding Critics juſtly reign'd,
Licence repreſs'd, and uſeful laws ordain'd.
Learning and Rome alike in empire grew;
And Arts ſtill follow'd where her Eagles flew;
From the ſame foes, at laſt, both felt their doom,
And the ſame age ſaw Learning fall, and Rome.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 682. Thus long ſucceeding Critics, etc.] The next period in which the true Critic (he tells us) appear'd was at the revival and reſtoration of letters in the Weſt. This occaſions his giving a ſhort hiſtory [from v. 683 to 710.] of the decline and re-eſtabliſhment of arts and ſciences in Italy. He ſhews that they both fell under the ſame enemy, deſpotic power; and that when both had made ſome little efforts to reſtore themſelves, they were ſoon quite overwhelmed by a ſecond deluge of another kind, Superſtition; and a calm of Dulneſs finiſh'd upon Rome and Letters what the rage of Barbariſm had begun:

A ſecond deluge learning thus o'er-run,
And the Monk finiſh'd what the Goth begun.

When things had been long in this condition, and all recovery now appear'd deſperate, it was a CRITIC, our author ſhews us for the honour of the Art he here teaches, who at length broke the charm of Dulneſs, diſſipated the inchantment, and, like another Hercules, drove thoſe cowl'd and hooded ſerpents from the Heſperian tree of knowledge, which they had ſo long guarded from human approach.

With Tyranny, then Superſtition join'd,
As that the body, this enſlav'd the mind;
Much was believ'd, but little underſtood,
And to be dull was conſtru'd to be good;
A ſecond deluge Learning thus o'er-run,
And the Monks finiſh'd what the Goths begun.
At length Eraſmus, that great injur'd name,
(The glory of the Prieſthood, and the ſhame!)

VARIATIONS.

Between v. 691 and 692, the author omitted theſe two,

Vain Wits and Critics were no more allow'd,
When none but Saints had licence to be proud. P.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 694. At length Eraſmus, etc.] Nothing can be more artful than the application of this example; or more happy than the turn of compliment to this admirable man. To throw glory quite round his illuſtrious character, he makes it to be (as in fact it really was) by his aſſiſtance chiefly, that Leo was enabled to reſtore letters and the fine arts, in his Pontificate.

NOTES.

VER. 695. The glory of the Prieſthood and the ſhame!] Our author elſewhere lets us know what he eſteems to be the glory of the Prieſthood as well as of a Chriſtian in general, where, comparing himſelf to Eraſmus, he ſays,

In MODERATION placing all my glory, and conſequently, what he eſteems to be the ſhame of it. The whole of this character belong'd moſt eminently and almoſt ſolely to Eraſmus: For the other Reformers, ſuch as Luther, Calvin, and their followers, underſtood ſo little in what true Chriſtian Liberty conſiſted, that they carried with them, into the reformed

Stem'd the wild torrent of a barb'rous age,
And drove thoſe holy Vandals off the ſtage.
But ſee! each Muſe, in Leo's golden days,
Starts from her trance, and trims her wither'd bays,
Rome's ancient Genius, o'er its ruins ſpread,
Shakes off the duſt, and rears his rev'rend head.
Then Sculpture and her ſiſter-arts revive;
Stones leap'd to form, and rocks began to live;
With ſweeter notes each riſing Temple rung;
A Raphael painted, and a Vida ſung.
Immortal Vida: on whoſe honour'd brow
The Poet's bays and Critic's ivy grow:
Cremona now ſhall ever boaſt thy name,
As next in place to Mantua, next in fame!
But ſoon by impious arms from Latium chas'd,
Their ancient bounds the baniſh'd Muſes paſs'd;

COMMENTARY.

VER. 698. But ſee each Muſe in Leo's golden days] This preſents us with the ſecond period in which the true Critic appear'd; of whom he has given us a perfect idea in the ſingle example of Marcus Hieronimus Vida: For his ſubject being poetical Criticiſm, for the uſe principally of a Critical Poet; his example is an eminent poetical Critic, who had written of that Art in verſe.

ſack of Rome by the duke of Bourbon, had driven it out of Italy, and forced it to paſs the Mountains—The Examples he gives in this period, are of Boileau in France, and of the Lord Roſcommon and the duke of Buckingham in England: And theſe were all Poets, as well as Critics in verſe. It is true, the laſt inſtance is of one who was no eminent poet, the late Mr. Walſh. This ſmall deviation might be well over-looked, was it only for its being a pious office to the memory of his friend: But it may be farther juſtified as it was an homage paid in particular to the MORALS of the Critic, nothing being more amiable than the character here drawn of this excellent perſon. He being our Author's Judge and Cenſor, as well as Friend, it gives him a graceful opportunity to add himſelf to the number of the later Critics; and with a character of himſelf, ſuſtained by that modeſty and dignity which it is ſo difficult to make conſiſtent, this performance concludes.

I have given a ſhort and plain account of the Eſſay on Criticiſm, concerning which I have but one thing more to acquaint the reader: That when he conſiders the Regularity of the plan, the maſterly Conduct of each part, the penetration into Nature, and the compaſs of Learning, ſo conſpicuous throughout, he ſhould at the ſame time know, it was the work of an Author who had not attained the twentieth year of his age.

Who durſt aſſert the juſter ancient cauſe,
And here reſtor'd Wit's fundamental laws.
Such was the Muſe, whoſe rules and practice tell,
"Nature's chief Maſter-piece is writing well."
Such was Roſcommon, not more learn'd than good,
With manners gen'rous as his noble blood;
To him the wit of Greece and Rome was known,
And ev'ry author's merit, but his own.

NOTES.

VER. 724. Such was the Muſe—] Eſſay on Poetry by the Duke of Buckingham. Our Poet is not the only one of his time who complimented this Eſſay, and its noble Author. Mr. Dryden had done it very largely in the Dedication to his tranſlation of the Æneid; and Dr. Garth in the firſt Edition of his Diſpenſary ſays,

The Tiber now no courtly Gallus ſees,
But ſmiling Thames enjoys his Normanbys.

Tho' afterwards omitted, when parties were carried ſo high in the reign of Queen Anne, as to allow no commendation to an oppoſite in Politics. The Duke was all his life a ſteady adherent to the Church of England-Party, yet an enemy to the extravagant meaſures of the Court in the reign of Charles II. On which account after having ſtrongly patronized Mr. Dryden, a coolneſs ſucceeded between them on that poet's abſolute attachment to the Court, which carried him ſome lengths beyond what the Duke could approve of. This Nobleman's true character had been very well marked by Mr. Dryden before, the Muſe's friend,

Himſelf a Muſe. In Sanadrin's debate
True to his prince, but not a ſlave of ſtate.
Abſ. and Achit.

Our Author was more happy, he was honour'd very young with his friendſhip, and it continued till his death in all the circumſtances of a familiar eſteem. P.

Such late was Walſh—the Muſe's judge and friend,
Who juſtly knew to blame or to commend;
To failings mild, but zealous for deſert;
The cleareſt head, and the ſincereſt heart.
This humble praiſe, lamented ſhade! receive,
This praiſe at leaſt a grateful Muſe may give:
The Muſe, whoſe early voice you taught to ſing,
Preſcrib'd her heights, and prun'd her tender wing,
(Her guide now loſt) no more attempts to riſe,
But in low numbers ſhort excurſions tries:
Content, if hence th' unlearn'd their wants may view,
The learn'd reflect on what before they knew:
Careleſs of cenſure, nor too fond of fame;
Still pleas'd to praiſe, yet not afraid to blame,
Averſe alike to flatter, or offend;
Not free from faults, nor yet too vain to mend.

AN

HEROI-COMICAL

POEM.

Written in the Year MDCCXII.

TO

Mrs. ARABELLA FERMOR.

MADAM,

IT will be in vain to deny that I have ſome regard for this piece, ſince I dedicate it to You. Yet you may bear me witneſs, it was intended only to divert a few young Ladies, who have good ſenſe and good humour enough to laugh not only at their ſex's little unguarded follies but at their own. But as it was communicated with the air of a Secret, it ſoon found its way into the world. An imperfect copy having been offer'd to a Bookſeller, you had the good-nature for my ſake to conſent to the publication of one more correct: This I was forc'd to, before I had executed half my deſign, for the Machinery was entirely wanting to compleat it.

The Machinery, Madam, is a term invented by the Critics, to ſignify that part which the Deities, Angels, or Dæmons are made to act in a Poem: For the ancient Poets are in one reſpect like many modern Ladies: let an action be never ſo trivial in itſelf, they always make it appear of the utmoſt importance. Theſe Machines I determined to raiſe on a very new and odd foundation, the Roſicrucian doctrine of Spirits.

I know how diſagreeable it is to make uſe of hard words before a Lady; but 'tis ſo much the concern of a Poet to have his works underſtood, and particularly by your Sex, that you muſt give me leave to explain two or three difficult terms.

The Roſicrucians are a people I muſt bring you acquainted with. The beſt account I know of them is in a French book call'd Le Comte de Gabalis, which both in its title and size is so like a Novel, that many of the Fair Sex have read it for one by mistake. According to these Gentlemen, the four Elements are inhabited by Spirits, which they call Sylphs, Gnomes, Nymphs, and Salamanders. The Gnomes or Dæmons of Earth delight in mischief; but the Sylphs, whose habitation is in the Air, are the best condition'd creatures imaginable. For they say, any mortals may enjoy the most intimate familiarities with these gentle Spirits, upon a condition very easy to all true Adepts, an inviolate preservation of Chastity.

As to the following Canto's, all the passages of them are as fabulous, as the Vision at the beginning, or the Transformation at the end; (except the loss of your Hair, which I always mention with reverence.) The Human persons are as fictitious as the airy ones; and the character of Belinda, as it is now manag'd, resembles you in nothing but in Beauty.

If this Poem had as many Graces as there are in your Person, or in your Mind, yet I could never hope it should pass thro' the world half so Uncensur'd as You have done. But let its fortune be what it will, mine is happy enough, to have given me this occasion of assuring you that I am, with the truest esteem,

MADAM,

Your most obedient, Humble Servant,

A. POPE.

CANTO I.

WHAT dire offence from am'rous cauſes ſprings,
What mighty conteſts riſe from trivial things,
I ſing—This verſe to CARYL, Muſe! is due:
This, ev'n Belinda may vouchſafe to view:

NOTES.

[a] It appears, by this Motto, that the following Poem was written or publiſhed at the Lady's requeſt. But there are ſome further circumſtances not unworthy relating. Mr. Caryl (a Gentleman who was Secretary to Queen Mary, wife of James II. whoſe fortunes he followed into France, Author of the Comedy of Sir Solomon Single, and of ſeveral tranſlations in Dryden's Miſcellanies) originally propoſed the ſubject to him in a view of putting an end, by this piece of ridicule, to a quarrel that was riſen between two noble Families, thoſe of Lord Petre and of Mrs. Fermor, on the trifling occaſion of his having cut off a lock of her hair. The Author ſent it to the Lady, with whom he was acquainted; and ſhe took it ſo well as to give about copies of it. That firſt ſketch, (we learn from one of his Letters) was written in leſs than a fortnight, in 1711, in two Canto's only, and it was ſo printed; firſt, in a Miſcellany of Bern. Lintot's, without the name of the

Slight is the ſubject, but not ſo the praiſe,
If She inſpire, and He approve my lays.
Say what ſtrange motive, Goddeſs! could compel
A well-bred Lord t'aſſault a gentle Belle?
Oh ſay what ſtranger cauſe, yet unexplor'd,
Could make a gentle Belle reject a Lord?
In taſks ſo bold, can little men engage,
And in ſoft boſoms dwells ſuch mighty Rage?
Sol thro' white curtains ſhot a tim'rous ray,
And ope'd thoſe eyes that muſt eclipſe the day:
Now lap-dogs give themſelves the rouſing ſhake,
And ſleepleſs lovers, juſt at twelve, awake:
Thrice rung the bell, the ſlipper knock'd the ground
And the preſs'd watch return'd a ſilver ſound.

Sol thro' white curtains did his beams diſplay,

NOTES.

Author. But it was received ſo well that he made it more conſiderable the next year by the addition of the machinery of the Sylphs, and extended it to five Canto's. We ſhall give the reader the pleaſure of ſeeing in what manner theſe additions were inſerted, ſo as to ſeem not to be added, but to grow out of the Poem. See Notes, Cant. I. v. 19, etc. P.

This inſertion he always eſteemed, and juſtly, the greateſt effort of his ſkill and art as a Poet.

Belinda ſtill her downy pillow preſt,
Her guardian SYLPH prolong'd the balmy reſt:
'Twas He had ſummon'd to her ſilent bed
The morning-dream that hover'd o'er her head,

NOTES.

VER. 19. Belinda ſtill, etc.] All the verſes from hence to the end of this Canto were added afterwards.

VER. 20. Her Guardian Sylph] When Mr. Pope had projected to give this Poem its preſent form, he was obliged to find it with its Machinery. For as the ſubject of the Epic-Poem conſiſts of two parts, the metaphyſical and the civil; ſo this mock epic, which is of the ſatiric kind, and receives its grace from a ludicrous imitation of the other's pomp and ſolemnity, was to have the ſame diviſion of the ſubject. And, as the civil part is intentionally debaſed by the choice of an inſignificant action: ſo ſhould the metaphyſical, by the uſe of ſome very extravagant ſyſtem. A rule, which tho' neither Boileau nor Garth have been careful enough to attend to, our Author's good ſenſe would not ſuffer him to overlook. And that ſort of Machinery which his judgment taught him was only fit for his uſe, his admirable invention ſupplied. There was but one ſyſtem in all nature which was to his purpoſe, the Roſicrucian Philoſophy; and this, by the well directed effort of his imagination, he preſently ſeized upon. The fanatic Alchemiſts, in their ſearch after the great ſecret, had invented a means altogether proportioned to their end. It was a kind of Theological-Philoſophy, made up of almoſt equal mixtures of Pagan Platoniſm, Chriſtian Quietiſm, and the Jewiſh Cabbala; a compoſition enough to fright Reaſon from human commerce. This general ſyſtem, he tells us, he took as he found it in a little French tract called, Le Comte de Gabalis. This book is written in Dialogue, and is a delicate and very ingenious piece of raillery of the Abbe Villiers, upon that inviſible ſect, of which the ſtories that went about at that time, made a great deal of noiſe at Paris. But,

A Youth more glitt'ring than a Birth-night Beau,
(That ev'n in ſlumber caus'd her cheek to glow)
Seem'd to her ear his winning lips to lay,
And thus in whiſpers ſaid, or ſeem'd to ſay.
Faireſt of mortals, thou diſtinguiſh'd care
Of thouſand bright Inhabitants of Air!
If e'er one viſion touch'd thy infant thought,
Of all the Nurſe and all the Prieſt have taught;
Of airy Elves by moonlight ſhadows ſeen,
The ſilver token, and the circled green,
Or virgins viſited by Angel-pow'rs,
With golden crowns and wreaths of heav'nly flow'rs;
Hear and believe! thy own importance know,
Nor bound thy narrow views to things below.
Some ſecret truths, from learned pride conceal'd,
To Maids alone and Children are reveal'd:

NOTES.

as in this ſatirical Dialogue, Mr. P. found ſeveral whimſies, of a very high myſterious kind, told of the nature of theſe elementary beings, which were very unfit to come into the machinery of ſuch a ſort of poem, he has with great judgment omitted them; and in their ſtead, made uſe of the Legendary ſtories of Guardian Angels, and the Nurſery Tales of the Fairies; which he has artfully accommodated to the reſt of the Roſicrucian Syſtem. And to this, (unleſs we will be ſo uncharitable to believe he intended to give a needleſs ſcandal) we muſt ſuppoſe he referred, in theſe two lines,

If e'er one Viſion touch'd thy infant thought,
Of all the nurſe, and all the prieſt have taught.

Thus, by the moſt beautiful invention imaginable, he has contrived, that, as in the ſerious Epic, the popular belief ſupports the Machinery; ſo, in his mock Epic, the Machinery ſhould be contrived to diſmount philoſophic pride and arrogance.

What tho' no credit doubting Wits may give?
The fair and Innocent ſhall ſtill believe.
Know then, unnumber'd Spirits round thee fly,
The light Militia of the lower ſky:
Theſe, tho' unſeen, are ever on the wing,
Hang o'er the Box, and hover round the Ring.
Think what an equipage thou haſt in Air,
And view with ſcorn two Pages and a Chair.
As now your own, our beings were of old,
And once inclos'd in Woman's beauteous mould;
Thence, by a ſoft tranſition, we repair
From earthly Vehicles to theſe of air.
Think not, when Woman's tranſient breath is fled,
That all her vanities at once are dead;
Succeeding vanities ſhe ſtill regards,
And tho' ſhe plays no more, o'erlooks the cards.
Her joy in gilded Chariots, when alive,
And love of Ombre, after death ſurvive.
For when the Fair in all their pride expire,
To their firſt Elements their Souls retire:

NOTES.

VER. 47. As now your own, etc.] He here forſakes the Roſicrucian ſyſtem; which, in this part, is too extravagant even for Poetry; and gives a beautiful fiction of his own, on the Platonic Theology of the continuance of the paſſions in another ſtate, when the mind, before its leaving this, has not been purged and purified by philoſophy; which furniſhes an occaſion for much uſeful ſatire.

The Sprites of fiery Termagants in Flame
Mount up, and take a Salamander's name.
Soft yielding minds to Water glide away,
And ſip, with Nymphs, their elemental Tea.
The graver Prude ſinks downward to a Gnome,
In ſearch of miſchief ſtill on Earth to roam.
The light Coquettes in Sylphs aloft repair,
And ſport and flutter in the fields of Air.

Know farther yet; whoever fair and chaſte
Rejects mankind, is by ſome Sylph embrac'd:
For Spirits, freed from mortal laws, with eaſe
Aſſume what ſexes and what ſhapes they pleaſe.
What guards the purity of melting Maids,
In courtly balls, and midnight maſquerades,
Safe from the treach'rous friend, the daring ſpark,
The glance by day, the whiſper in the dark,
When kind occaſion prompts their warm deſires,
When muſic ſoftens, and when dancing fires?
'Tis but their Sylph, the wiſe Celeſtials know,
Tho' Honour is the word with Men below.

Some nymphs there are, too conſcious of their face,
For life predeſtin'd to the Gnomes embrace.
Theſe ſwell their proſpects and exalt their pride,
When offers are diſdain'd, and love deny'd:

NOTES.

VER. 68, is by ſome Sylph embrac'd] Here again the Author reſumes a tenet peculiar to the Roſicruſian ſyſtem But the principle, on which it is founded, was by no means fit to be employed in ſuch a ſort of poem.

VER. 78. Tho' Honour is the word with Men below.] Parody of Homer.

VER. 79. too conſcious of their face,] i. e. too ſenſible of their beauty.

Then gay Ideas croud the vacant brain,
While Peers, and Dukes, and all their ſweeping train,
And Garters, Stars, and Coronets appear,
And in ſoft ſounds, Your Grace ſalutes their ear.
'Tis theſe that early taint the female ſoul,
Inſtruct the eyes of young Coquettes to roll,
Teach Infant-cheeks a bidden bluſh to know,
And little hearts to flutter at a Beau.

Oft, when the world imagine women ſtray,
The Sylphs thro' myſtic mazes guide their way,
Thro' all the giddy circle they purſue,
And old impertinence expel by new.
What tender maid but muſt a victim fall
To one man's treat, but for another's ball?
When Florio ſpeaks what virgin could withſtand,
If gentle Damon did not ſqueeze her hand?
With varying vanities, from ev'ry part,
They ſhift the moving Toyſhop of their heart;
Where wigs with wigs, with ſword-knots ſword-knots ſtrive,
Beaux baniſh beaux, and coaches coaches drive.
This erring mortals Levity may call,
Oh blind to truth! the Sylphs contrive it all.

Of theſe am I, who thy protection claim,
A watchful ſprite, and Ariel is my name.

In the clear Mirror of thy ruling Star
I ſaw, alas! ſome dread event impend,
Ere to the main this morning ſun deſcend,
But heav'n reveals not what, or how, or where:
Warn'd by the Sylph, oh pious maid, beware!
This to diſcloſe is all thy guardian can:
Beware of all, but moſt beware of Man!
He ſaid; when Shock, who thought ſhe ſlept too long,
Leap'd up, and wak'd his miſtreſs with his tongue.
'Twas then Belinda, if report ſay true,
Thy eyes firſt open'd on a Billet-doux;
Wounds, Charms, and Ardors, were no ſooner read,
But all the Viſion vaniſh'd from thy head.
And now, unveil'd, the Toilet ſtands diſplay'd,
Each ſilver Vaſe in myſtic order laid.

NOTES.

VER. 113. This to diſcloſe etc.] There is much pleaſantry in the conduct of this ſcene. The Roſicruſian Doctrine was delivered only to Adepts, with the utmoſt caution, and under the moſt ſolemn ſeal of ſecrecy. It is here communicated to a Woman, and in that way of conveyance a Woman moſt delights to make the ſubject of her converſation, that is to ſay, her Dreams.

VER. 121. And now, unveil'd, etc.] The tranſlation of theſe verſes, containing the deſcription of the toilette, by our Author's friend Dr. Parnelle, deſerve for their humour, to be here inſerted. P.

Firſt, rob'd in white, the Nymph intent adores,
With head uncover'd, the Coſmetic pow'rs.
A heav'nly image in the glaſs appears,
To that ſhe bends, to that her eyes ſhe rears;
Th' inferior Prieſteſs, at her altar's ſide,
Trembling begins the ſacred rites of Pride.
Unnumber'd treaſures ope at once, and here
The various off'rings of the world appear;
From each ſhe nicely culls with curious toil,
And decks the Goddeſs with the glitt'ring ſpoil.

The fair each moment riſes in her charms,
Repairs her ſmiles, awakens ev'ry grace,

CANTO II.

NOT with more glories, in th' etherial plain,
The Sun firſt riſes o'er the purpled main,
Than, iſſuing forth, the rival of his beams
Launch'd on the boſom of the ſilver Thames.
Fair Nymphs, and well-dreſt Youths around her ſhone,
But ev'ry eye was fix'd on her alone.
On her white breaſt a ſparkling Croſs ſhe wore,
Which Jews might kiſs, and Infidels adore.
Her lively looks a ſprightly mind diſcloſe,
Quick as her eyes, and as unfix'd as thoſe:
Favours to none, to all ſhe ſmiles extends;
Oft ſhe rejects, but never once offends.
Bright as the ſun, her eyes the gazers ſtrike,
And, like the ſun, they ſhine on all alike.
Yet graceful eaſe, and ſweetneſs void of pride
Might hide her faults, if Belles had faults to hide:
If to her ſhare ſome female errors fall,
Look on her face, and you'll forget 'em all.

Slight lines of hair ſurprize the finny prey,
Fair treſſes man's imperial race inſnare,
And beauty draws us with a ſingle hair.
Th' advent'rous Baron the bright locks admir'd;
He ſaw, he wiſh'd, and to the prize aſpir'd.
Reſolv'd to win, he meditates the way,
By force to raviſh, or by fraud betray;
For when ſucceſs a Lover's toil attends,
Few aſk, if fraud or force attain'd his ends.
For this, ere Phœbus roſe, he had implor'd
Propitious heav'n, and ev'ry pow'r ador'd,
But chiefly Love —— to Love an Altar built,
Of twelve vaſt French Romances, neatly gilt.
There lay three garters, half a pair of gloves;
And all the trophies of his former loves;
With tender Billet-doux he lights the pyre,
And breathes three am'rous ſighs to raiſe the fire.
Then proſtrate falls, and begs with ardent eyes
Soon to obtain, and long poſſeſs the prize:

The pow'rs gave ear, and granted half his pray'r,
The reſt, the winds diſpers'd in empty air.
But now ſecure the painted veſſel glides,
The ſun-beams trembling on the floating tides:
While melting muſic ſteals upon the ſky,
And ſoften'd ſounds along the waters die;
Smooth flow the waves, the Zephyrs gently play,
Belinda ſmil'd, and all the world was gay.
All but the Sylph — with careful thoughts oppreſt,
Th' impending woe ſat heavy on his breaſt.
He ſummons ſtrait his Denizens of air;
The lucid ſquadrons round the ſails repair;
Soft o'er the ſhrouds aërial whiſpers breathe,
That ſeem'd but Zephyrs to the train beneath.
Some to the ſun their inſect-wings unfold,
Waft on the breeze, or ſink in clouds of gold;
Tranſparent forms, too fine for mortal ſight,
Their fluid bodies half diſſolv'd in light.
Looſe to the wind their airy garments flew,
Thin glitt'ring textures of the filmy dew,
Dipt in the richeſt tincture of the ſkies,
Where light diſports in ever-mingling dyes,
While ev'ry beam new tranſient colours flings,
Colours that change whene'er they wave their wings.
Amid the circle, on the gilded maſt,
Superior by the head, was Ariel plac'd;
His purple pinions op'ning to the ſun,
He rais'd his azure wand, and thus begun.

And baſk and whiten in the blaze of day.
Some guide the courſe of wand'ring orbs on high,
Or roll the planets thro' the boundleſs ſky.
Some leſs refin'd, beneath the moon's pale light
Purſue the ſtars that ſhoot athwart the night,
Or ſuck the miſts in groſſer air below,
Or dip their pinions in the painted bow,
Or brew fierce tempeſts on the wintry main,
Or o'er the glebe diſtil the kindly rain.
Others on earth o'er human race preſide,
Watch all their ways, and all their actions guide:
Of theſe the chief the care of Nations own,
And guard with Arms divine the Britiſh Throne.
Our humbler province is to tend the Fair,
Not a leſs pleaſing, tho' leſs glorious care;
To ſave the powder from too rude a gale,
Nor let th' impriſon'd eſſences exhale;
To draw freſh colours from the vernal flow'rs;
To ſteal from rainbows e'er they drop in ſhow'rs
A brighter waſh; to curl their waving hairs,
Aſſiſt their bluſhes, and inſpire their airs;

NOTES.

VER. 97. And guard with Arms] The Poet was too judicious to deſire this ſhould be underſtood as a compliment. He intended it for a mere piece of raillery; ſuch as he more openly purſues on another occaſion.

Where's now the Star which lighted Charles to riſe?
With that which follow'd Julius to the ſkies.
Angels, that watch'd the Royal Oak ſo well,
How chanc'd you ſlept when luckleſs Sorrel fell?

Nay oft, in dreams, invention we beſtow,
To change a Flounce, or add a Furbelow.
This day, black Omens threat the brighteſt Fair,
That e'er deſerv'd a watchful ſpirit's care;
Some dire diſaſter, or by force, or ſlight;
But what, or where, the fates have wrapt in night.
Whether the nymph ſhall break Diana's law,
Or ſome frail China jar receive a flaw;
Or ſtain her honour or her new brocade;
Forget her pray'rs, or miſs a maſquerade;
Or loſe her heart, or necklace, at a ball;
Or whether Heav'n has doom'd that Shock muſt fall.
Haſte then, ye ſpirits! to your charge repair:
The flutt'ring fan be Zephyretta's care;
The drops to thee, Brillante, we conſign;
And, Momentilla, let the watch be thine;
Do thou, Criſpiſſa, tend her fav'rite Lock;
Ariel himſelf ſhall be the guard of Shock.
To fifty choſen Sylphs, of ſpecial note,
We truſt th' important charge, the Petticoat:

Draw forth to combat on the velvet plain.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 24. And the long labours of the Toilet ceaſe.] All that follows of the game at Ombre, was added ſince the firſt Edition, till v. 105, which connected thus,

Sudden the board with cups and ſpoons is crown'd. P.

The ſkilful Nymph reviews her force with care:
Let Spades be trumps! ſhe ſaid, and trumps they were.
Now move to war her ſable Matadores,
In ſhow like leaders of the ſwarthy Moors.
Spadillio firſt, unconquerable Lord!
Led off two captive trumps, and ſwept the board.
As many more Manillio forc'd to yield,
And march'd a victor from the verdant field.
Him Baſto follow'd, but his fate more hard
Gain'd but one trump and one Plebeian card.
With his broad ſabre next, a chief in years,
The hoary Majeſty of Spades appears,
Puts forth one manly leg, to ſight reveal'd,
The reſt, his many-colour'd robe conceal'd.
The rebel Knave, who dares his prince engage,
Proves the juſt victim of his royal rage.
Ev'n mighty Pam, that Kings and Queens o'erthrew
And mow'd down armies in the fights of Lu,
Sad chance of war! now deſtitute of aid,
Falls undiſtinguiſh'd by the victor ſpade!
Thus far both armies to Belinda yield;
Now to the Baron fate inclines the field.
His warlike Amazon her hoſt invades,
Th' imperial conſort of the crown of Spades.
The Club's black Tyrant firſt her victim dy'd,
Spite of his haughty mein, and barb'rous pride:

NOTES.

VER. 47. Now move to war etc.] The whole idea of this deſcription of a game at Ombre, is taken from Vida's deſcription of a game at Cheſs, in his poem intit. Scacchia Ludus.

What boots the regal circle on his head,
His giant limbs, in ſtate unwieldy ſpread;
That long behind he trails his pompous robe,
And, of all monarch's, only graſps the globe?
The Baron now his Diamonds pours apace;
Th' embroider'd King who ſhows but half his face,
And his refulgent Queen, with pow'rs combin'd
Of broken troops an eaſy conqueſt find.
Clubs, Diamonds, Hearts, in wild diſorder ſeen,
With throngs promiſcuous ſtrow the level green.
Thus when diſpers'd a routed army runs,
Of Aſia's troops, and Afric's ſable ſons,
With like confuſion diff'rent nations fly,
Of various habit, and of various dye,
The pierc'd battalions diſ-united fall,
In heaps on heaps; one fate o'erwhelms them all.
The Knave of Diamonds tries his wily arts,
And wins (oh ſhameful chance!) the Queen of Hearts.
At this, the blood the virgin's cheek forſook,
A livid paleneſs ſpreads o'er all her look;
She ſees, and trembles at th' approaching ill,
Juſt in the jaws of ruin, and Codille.
And now, (as oft in ſome diſtemper'd State)
On one nice Trick depends the gen'ral fate.
An Ace of Hearts ſteps forth: The King unſeen
Lurk'd in her hand, and mourn'd his captive Queen:
He ſprings to Vengeance with an eager pace,
And falls like thunder on the proſtrate Ace.
The nymph exulting fills with ſhouts the ſky;
The walls, the woods, and long canals reply.
Oh thoughtleſs mortals! ever blind to fate,
Too ſoon dejected, and too ſoon elate.
Sudden, theſe honours ſhall be ſnatch'd away,
And curs'd for ever this victorious day.

For lo! the board with cups and ſpoons is crown'd,
The berries crackle, and the mill turns round;
On ſhining Altars of Japan they raiſe
The ſilver lamp; the fiery ſpirits blaze:
From ſilver ſpouts the grateful liquors glide,
While China's earth receives the ſmoaking tyde:
At once they gratify their ſcent and taſte,
And frequent cups prolong the rich repaſte.
Strait hover round the Fair her airy band;
Some, as ſhe ſipp'd, the fuming liquor fann'd,
Some o'er her lap their careful plumes diſplay'd,
Trembling, and conſcious of the rich brocade.
Coffee, (which makes the politician wiſe,
And ſee thro' all things with his half-ſhut eyes)
Sent up in vapours to the Baron's brain
New Stratagems, the radiant Lock to gain.
Ah ceaſe, raſh youth! deſiſt ere 'tis too late,
Fear the juſt Gods, and think of Scylla's Fate!
Chang'd to a bird, and ſent to flit in air,
She dearly pays for Niſus' injur'd hair!

NOTES.

VER. 122. and think of Scylla's Fate!] Vide Ovid Metam. viii. P.

But when to mischief mortals bend their will,
How soon they find fit instruments of ill?
Just then, Clarissa drew with tempting grace
A two-edg'd weapon from her shining case:
So Ladies in Romance assist their Knight,
Present the spear, and arm him for the fight.
He takes the gift with rev'rence, and extends,
The little engine on his fingers ends;
This just behind Belinda's neck he spread,
As o'er the fragrant steams she bends her head.
Swift to the Lock a thousand Sprites repair,
A thousand wings, by turns, blow back the hair;
And thrice they twitch'd the diamond in her ear;
Thrice she look'd back, and thrice the foe drew near.
Just in that instant, anxious Ariel sought
The close recesses of the Virgin's thought;
As on the nosegay in her breast reclin'd,
He watch'd th' Ideas rising in her mind,
Sudden he view'd, in spite of all her art,
An earthly Lover lurking at her heart.
Amaz'd confus'd, he found his pow'r expir'd,
Resign'd to fate, and with a sigh retir'd.
The Peer now spreads the glitt'ring Forfex wide,
T' inclose the Lock; now joins it, to divide.
Ev'n then, before the fatal engine clos'd,
A wretched Sylph too fondly interpos'd;

VARIATIONS.

VER. 134. In the first Edition it was thus,
As o'er the fragrant stream she bends her head.
First he expands the glitt'ring forfex wide
T' inclose the Lock; then joins it to divide:
The meeting Points the sacred hair dissever,
From the fair head, for ever and for ever. v. 154.
All that is between was added afterwards. P.

Fate urg'd the ſheers, and cut the Sylph in twain,
(But airy ſubſtance ſoon unites again)
The meeting points the ſacred hair diſſever
From the fair head, for ever, and for ever!
Then flaſh'd the living lightning from her eyes,
And ſcreams of horror rend th' affrighted ſkies.
Not louder ſhrieks to pitying heaven are caſt,
When huſbands, or when lapdogs breathe their laſt;
Or when rich China veſſels fall'n from high,
In glitt'ring duſt, and painted fragments lie!
Let wreaths of triumph now my temples twine,
(The victor cry'd) the glorious Prize is mine!
While fiſh in ſtreams, or birds delight in air,
Or in a coach and ſix the Britiſh Fair,
As long as Atalantis ſhall be read,
Or the ſmall pillow grace a Lady's bed,
While viſits ſhall be paid on ſolemn days,
When num'rous wax-lights in bright order blaze,
While nymphs take treats, or aſſignations give,
So long my honour, name, and praiſe ſhall live!

NOTES.

VER. 152. But airy ſubſtance] See Milton, lib. vi. of Satan cut aſunder by the Angel Michael. P.

VER. 165. Atalantis] A famous book written about that time by a woman: full of Court, and Party-ſcandal; and in a looſe effeminacy of ſtyle and ſentiment, which well ſuited the debauched taſte of the better Vulgar.

CANTO IV.

BUT anxious cares the penſive nymph oppreſs'd,
And ſecret paſſions labour'd in her breaſt.
Not youthful kings in battle ſeiz'd alive,
Not ſcornful virgins who their charms ſurvive,
Not ardent lovers robb'd of all their bliſs,
Not ancient ladies when refus'd a kiſs,
Not tyrants fierce that unrepenting die,
Not Cynthia when her manteau's pinn'd awry,
E'er felt ſuch rage, reſentment, and deſpair,
As thou, ſad Virgin! for thy raviſh'd Hair.

For, that ſad moment, when the Sylphs withdrew,
And Ariel weeping from Belinda flew,
Umbriel, a duſky, melancholy ſprite,
As ever ſully'd the fair face of light,

VARIATIONS.

VER. 11. For that ſad moment, etc.] All the lines from hence to the 94th verſe that deſcribe the houſe of Spleen are not in the firſt Edition; inſtead of them followed only theſe,

And continued at the 94th Verſe of this Canto. P.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 1. Virg. Æn. iv. At regina gravi, etc. P.

Down to the central earth, his proper ſcene,
Repair'd to ſearch the gloomy Cave of Spleen.
Swift on his ſooty pinions flits the Gnome,
And in a vapour reach'd the diſmal dome.
No chearful breeze this ſullen region knows,
The dreaded Eaſt is all the wind that blows.
Here in a grotto, ſhelter'd cloſe from air,
And ſcreen'd in ſhades from day's deteſted glare,
She ſighs for ever on her penſive bed,
Pain at her ſide, and Megrim at her head.
Two handmaids wait the throne: alike in place,
But diff'ring far in figure and in face.
Here ſtood Ill-nature like an ancient maid,
Her wrinkled form in black and white array'd;
With ſtore of pray'rs, for mornings, nights, and noons,
Her hand is fill'd; her boſom with lampoons.
There Affectation, with a ſickly mein,
Shows in her cheek the roſes of eighteen,
Practis'd to liſp, and hang the head aſide,
Faints into airs, and languiſhes with pride,
On the rich quilt ſinks with becoming woe,
Wrapt in a gown, for ſickneſs, and for ſhow.
The fair-ones feel ſuch maladies as theſe,
When each new night-dreſs gives a new diſeaſe.
A conſtant Vapour o'er the palace flies;
Strange phantoms riſing as the miſts ariſe;
Dreadful, as hermit's dreams in haunted ſhades,
Or bright, as viſions of expiring maids.

NOTES.

VER. 41. Dreadful as hermit's dreams in haunted ſhades, Or bright as viſions of expiring Maids.] The poet by this compariſon would inſinuate, that the temptations of the mortified recluſes in the Church of Rome, and the extatic viſions of their female ſaints were as

Now glaring fiends, and ſnakes on rolling ſpires,
Pale ſpectres, gaping tombs, and purple fires:
Now lakes of liquid gold, Elyſian ſcenes,
And cryſtal domes, and angels in machines.

Unnumber'd throngs on every ſide are ſeen,
Of bodies chang'd to various forms by Spleen.
Here living Tea-pots ſtand, one arm held out,
One bent; the handle this, and that the ſpout:
A Pipkin there, like Homer's Tripod walks;
Here ſighs a Jar, and there a Gooſe-pye talks;
Men prove with child, as pow'rful fancy works,
And maids turn'd bottles, call aloud for corks.

Safe paſt the Gnome thro' this fantaſtic band,
A branch of healing Spleenwort in his hand.
Then thus addreſs'd the pow'r—Hail, wayward Queen!
Who rule the ſex to fifty from fifteen:
Parent of vapours and of female wit,
Who give th' hyſteric, or poetic fit,
On various tempers act by various ways,
Make ſome take phyſic, others ſcribble plays;
Who cauſe the proud their viſits to delay,
And ſend the godly in a pet to pray.

VER. 52. and there a Gooſe-pye talks.] Alludes to a real fact, a Lady of diſtinction imagin'd herſelf in this condition. P.

A nymph there is, that all thy pow'r disdains,
And thousands more in equal mirth maintains.
But oh! if e'er thy Gnome could spoil a grace,
Or raise a pimple on a beauteous face,
Like Citron waters matrons-cheeks inflame,
Or change complexions at a losing game;
If e'er with airy horns I planted heads,
Or rumpled petticoats, or tumbled beds,
Or caus'd suspicion when no soul was rude,
Or discompos'd the head-dress of a Prude,
Or e're to costive lap-dog gave disease,
Which not the tears of brightest eyes could ease:
Hear me, and touch Belinda with chagrin,
That single act gives half the world the spleen.
The Goddess with a discontented air
Seems to reject him, tho' she grants his pray'r.
A wond'rous Bag with both her hands she binds,
Like that where once Ulysses held the winds;
There she collects the force of female lungs,
Sighs, sobs, and passions, and the war of tongues.
A Vial next she fills with fainting fears,
Soft sorrows, melting griefs, and flowing tears.
The Gnome rejoicing bears her gifts away,
Spreads his black wings, and slowly mounts to day.
Sunk in Thalestris' arms the nymph he found,
Her eyes dejected and her hair unbound.
Full o'er their heads the swelling bag he rent,
And all the Furies issu'd at the vent.
Belind burns with more than mortal ire,
And fierce Thalestris fans the rising fire.
O wretched maid! she spread her hands, and cry'd,
(While Hampton's echoes, wretched maid! reply'd)
Was it for this you took such constant care,
The bodkin, comb, and essence to prepare?

For this your locks in paper durance bound,
For this with tort'ring irons wreath'd around?
For this with fillets ſtrain'd your tender head,
And bravely bore the double loads of lead?
Gods! ſhall the raviſher diſplay your hair,
While the Fops envy, and the Ladies ſtare!
Honour forbid! at whoſe unrival'd ſhrine
Eaſe, pleaſure, virtue, all our ſex reſign.
Methinks already I your tears ſurvey,
Already hear the horrid things they ſay,
Already ſee you a degraded toaſt,
And all your honour in a whiſper loſt!
How ſhall I, then, your helpleſs fame defend?
'Twill then be infamy to ſeem your friend!
And ſhall this prize, th' ineſtimable prize,
Expos'd thro' cryſtal to the gazing eyes,
And heighten'd by the diamond's circling rays,
On that rapacious hand for ever blaze?
Sooner ſhall graſs in Hyde-park Circus grow,
And wits take lodgings in the ſound of Bow;
Sooner let earth, air, ſea, to Chaos fall,
Men, monkeys, lap dogs, parrots, periſh all!
She ſaid; then raging to Sir Plume repairs,
And bids her Beau demand the precious hairs:
(Sir Plume of amber ſnuff-box juſtly vain,
And the nice conduct of a clouded cane)
With earneſt eyes, and round unthinking face,
He firſt the ſnuff-box open'd, then the caſe,

NOTES.

VER. 121. Sir Plume repairs.] Sir George Brown. He was the only one of the Party who took the thing ſeriouſly. He was angry, that the Poet ſhould make him talk nothing but nonſenſe; and, in truth, one could not well blame him.

And thus broke out—" My Lord, why, what the devil?
" Z—ds! damn the lock! 'fore Gad, you muſt be civil!
" Plague on't! 'tis paſt a jeſt—nay prithee, pox!
" Give her the hair"—he ſpoke, and rapp'd his box.
It grieves me much (reply'd the Peer again)
Who ſpeaks ſo well ſhould ever ſpeak in vain.
But by this Lock, this ſacred Lock I ſwear,
(Which never more ſhall join its parted hair;
Which never more its honours ſhall renew,
Clip'd from the lovely head where late it grew)
That while my noſtrils draw the vital air,
This hand, which won it, ſhall for ever wear.
He ſpoke, and ſpeaking, in proud triumph ſpread
The long-contended honours of her head.
But Umbriel, hateful Gnome! forbears not ſo;
He breaks the Vial whence the ſorrows flow.
Then ſee! the nymph in beauteous grief appears,
Her eyes half-languiſhing, half-drown'd in tears;
On her heav'd boſom hung her drooping head,
Which, with a ſigh, ſhe rais'd; and thus ſhe ſaid.
For ever curs'd be this deteſted day,
Which ſnatch'd my beſt, my fav'rite curl away!
Happy! ah ten times happy had I been,
If Hampton-Court theſe eyes had never ſeen!

Yet am not I the firſt miſtaken maid,
By love of Courts to num'rous ills betray'd.
Oh had I rather un-admir'd remain'd
In ſome lone iſle, or diſtant Northern land;
Where the gilt Chariot never marks the way,
Where none learn Ombre, none e'er taſte Bohea!
There kept my charms conceal'd from mortal eye,
Like roſes, that in deſerts bloom and die.
What mov'd my mind with youthful Lords to roam?
O had I ſtay'd, and ſaid my pray'rs at home!
'Twas this, the morning omens ſeem'd to tell,
Thrice from my trembling hand the patch-box fell;
The tott'ring China ſhook without a wind,
Nay Poll ſat mute, and Shock was moſt unkind!
A Sylph too warn'd me of the threats of fate,
In myſtic viſions, now believ'd too late!
See the poor remnants of theſe ſlighted hairs!
My hands ſhall rend what ev'n thy rapine ſpares:
Theſe in two ſable ringlets taught to break,
Once gave new beauties to the ſnowy neck;
The ſiſter-lock now ſits uncouth, alone,
And in its fellow's fate foreſees its own;
Uncurl'd it hangs, the fatal ſheers demands,
And tempts once more, thy ſacrilegious hands.
Oh hadſt thou, cruel! been content to ſeize
Hairs leſs in ſight, or any hairs but theſe!

THE RAPE of the LOCK.

CANTO V.

SHE said: the pitying audience melt in tears.
But Fate and Jove had ſtopp'd the Baron's ears.
In vain Thaleſtris with reproach aſſails,
For who can move when fair Belinda fails?
Not half ſo fix'd the Trojan could remain,
While Anna begg'd and Dido rag'd in vain.
Then grave Clariſſa graceful wav'd her fan;
Silence enſu'd, and thus the nymph began.
Say why are Beauties prais'd and honour'd moſt,
The wiſe man's paſſion, and the vain man's toaſt?
Why deck'd with all that land and ſea afford,
Why Angels call'd, and Angel-like ador'd?
Why round our coaches croud the white glov'd Beaux,
Why bows the ſide-box from its inmoſt rows;

VER. 9. Say why are Beauties, etc.]
Why boaſt we, Glaucus! our extended reign,
Where Xanthus' ſtreams enrich the Lycian plain;

How vain are all these glories, all our pains,
Unless good sense preserve what beauty gains:
That men may say, when we the front-box grace,
Behold the first in virtue as in face!
Oh! if to dance all night, and dress all day,
Charm'd the small-pox, or chas'd old age away;
Who would not scorn what housewife's cares produce,
Or who would learn one earthly thing of use?
To patch, nay ogle, might become a Saint,
Nor could it sure be such a sin to paint.
But since, alas! frail beauty must decay,
Curl'd or uncurl'd, since Locks will turn to grey;

IMITATIONS.

Our num'rous herds that range the fruitful field,
And hills where vines their purple harvest yield;
Our foaming bowls with purer nectar crown'd,
Our feasts enhanc'd with music's sprightly sound;
Why on those shores are we with joy survey'd,
Admir'd as heroes, and as Gods obey'd;
Unless great acts superior merit prove,
And vindicate the bounteous powrs above?
'Tis ours, the dignity they give to grace;
The first in valour, as the first in place:
That when with wond'ring eyes our martial bands
Behold our deeds transcending our commands,
Such, they may cry, deserve the sov'reign state,
Whom those that envy, dare not imitate;
Could all our care elude the gloomy grave,
Which claims no less the fearful than the brave,
For lust of fame I should not vainly dare
In fighting fields, nor urge thy soul to war.
But since, alas! ignoble age must come,
Disease, and death's inexorable doom;
The life which others pay, let us bestow,
And give to fame what we to nature owe;
Brave tho' we fall, and honour'd if we live,
Or let us glory gain, or glory give.

Since painted, or not painted, all ſhall fade,
And ſhe who ſcorns a man, muſt die a maid;
What then remains but well our pow'r to uſe,
And keep good-humour ſtill whate'er we loſe?
And truſt me, dear! good-humour can prevail,
When airs, and flights, and ſcreams, and ſcolding fail.
Beauties in vain their pretty eyes may roll;
Charms ſtrike the ſight, but merit wins the ſoul.
So ſpoke the Dame, but no applauſe enſu'd;
Belinda frown'd, Thaleſtris call'd her Prude.
To arms, to arms! the fierce Virago cries,
And ſwift as lightning to the combat flies.
All ſide in parties, and begin th' attack;
Fans clap, ſilks ruſtle, and tough whalebones crack;
Heroes and Heroines ſhouts confus'dly riſe,
And baſe, and treble voices ſtrike the ſkies.
No common weapons in their hands are found,
Like Gods they fight, nor dread a mortal wound.
So when bold Homer makes the Gods engage,
And heav'nly breaſts with human paſſions rage;

Blue Neptune ſtorms, the bellowing deeps reſound:
Earth ſhakes her nodding towr's, the ground gives way,
And the pale ghoſts ſtart at the flaſh of day!
Triumphant Umbriel on a ſconce's height
Clap'd his glad wings, and ſate to view the fight:
Prop'd on their bodkin ſpears, the Sprights ſurvey
The growing combat, or aſſiſt the fray.
While thro' the preſs enrag'd Thaleſtris flies,
And ſcatters death around from both her eyes,
A Beau and Witling periſh'd in the throng,
One dy'd in metaphor, and one in ſong.
"O cruel nymph! a living death I bear,
Cry'd Dapperwit, and ſunk beſide his chair.
A mournful glance Sir Fopling upwards caſt,
"Thoſe eyes are made ſo killing—was his laſt.
Thus on Mæander's flow'ry margin lies
Th' expiring Swan, and as he ſings he dies.

Weighs the Men's wits againſt the Lady's hair;
The doubtful beam long nods from ſide to ſide;
At length the wits mount up, the hairs ſubſide.
See fierce Belinda on the Baron flies,
With more than uſual lightning in her eyes:
Nor fear'd the Chief th' unequal fight to try,
Who ſought no more than on his foe to die.
But this bold Lord with manly ſtrength endu'd,
She with one finger and a thumb ſubdu'd:
Juſt where the breath of life his noſtrils drew,
A charge of Snuff the wily virgin threw;
The Gnomes direct, to ev'ry atome juſt,
The pungent grains of titillating duſt.
Sudden, with ſtarting tears each eye o'erflows,
And the high dome re-echoes to his noſe.
Now meet thy fate, incens'd Belinda cry'd,
And drew a deadly bodkin from her ſide.
(The ſame, his ancient perſonage to deck,

All that I dread is leaving you behind!

But ſee how oft ambitious aims are croſs'd,
And chiefs contend 'till all the prize is loſt!
The Lock, obtain'd with guilt, and kept with pain,
In ev'ry place is ſought, but ſought in vain:
With ſuch a prize no mortal muſt be bleſt,
So heav'n decrees! with heav'n who can conteſt?
Some thought it mounted to the Lunar ſphere,
Since all things loſt on earth are treaſur'd there.
There Hero's wits are kept in pond'rous vaſes,
And beau's in ſnuff-boxes and tweezer-caſes.

Cages for gnats, and chains to yoak a flea,
Dry'd butterflies, and tomes of caſuiſtry.
But truſt the Muſe---ſhe ſaw it upward riſe,
Tho' mark'd by none but quick, poetic eyes:

NOTES.

VER. 114. Since all things loſt] Vid. Arioſto. Canto xxxiv. P.

(So Rome's great founder to the heav'ns withdrew,
To Proculus alone confeſs'd in view)
A ſudden Star, it ſhot thro' liquid air,
And drew behind a radiant trail of hair.
Not Berenice's Locks firſt roſe ſo bright,
The heav'ns beſpangling with diſhevel'd light.
The Sylphs behold it kindling as it flies,
And pleas'd purſue its progreſs thro' the ſkies.
This the Beau monde ſhall from the Mall ſurvey,
And hail with muſic its propitious ray.
This the bleſt Lover ſhall for Venus take,
And ſend up vows from Roſamonda's lake.
This Partridge ſoon ſhall view in cloudleſs ſkies,
When next he looks thro' Galilæo's eyes;
And hence th' egregious wizard ſhall foredoom
The fate of Louis, and the fall of Rome.
Then ceaſe, bright Nymph! to mourn thy raviſh'd hair,
Which adds new glory to the ſhining ſphere!
Not all the treſſes that fair head can boaſt,
Shall draw ſuch envy as the Lock you loſt.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 131. The Sylphs behold] Theſe two lines added for the ſame reaſon to keep in view the Machinery of the Poem. P.

NOTES.

VER. 137. This Partridge ſoon] John Partridge was a ridiculous Star-gazer, who in his Almanacks every year never fail'd to predict the downfall of the Pope, and the King of France, then at war with the Engliſh. P.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 128.

Flammiferumque trahens ſpatioſo limite crinem
Stella micat, Ovid.

For, after all the murders of your eye,
When, after millions ſlain, yourſelf ſhall die:
When thoſe fair ſuns ſhall ſet, as ſet they muſt,
And all thoſe treſſes ſhall be laid in duſt,
This Lock, the Muſe ſhall conſecrate to fame,
And 'midſt the ſtars inſcribe Belinda's name.

ELEGY

To the MEMORY of an UNFORTUNATE LADY*.

WHAT beck'ning ghoſt, along the moon-light ſhade
Invites my ſteps, and points to yonder glade?
'Tis ſhe!—but why that bleeding boſom gor'd,
Why dimly gleams the viſionary ſword?
Oh ever beauteous, ever friendly! tell,
Is it, in heav'n, a crime to love too well?
To bear too tender, or too firm a heart,
To act a Lover's or a Roman's part?
Is there no bright reverſion in the ſky,
For thoſe who greatly think, or bravely die?
Why bade ye elſe, ye Pow'rs! her ſoul aſpire
Above the vulgar flight of low deſire?
Ambition firſt ſprung from your bleſt abodes;
The glorious fault of Angels and of Gods;
Thence to their images on earth it flows,
And in the breaſts of Kings and Heroes glows.

NOTES.

* See the Duke of Buckingham's verſes to a Lady deſigning to retire into a Monaſtery compared with Mr. Pope's Letters to ſeveral Ladies, p. 206. She ſeems to be the ſame perſon whoſe unfortunate death is the ſubject of this poem. P.

Moſt ſouls, 'tis true, but peep out once an age,
Dull ſullen pris'ners in the body's cage:
Dim lights of life, that burn a length of years
Uſeleſs, unſeen, as lamps in ſepulchres;
Like Eaſtern Kings a lazy ſtate they keep,
And cloſe confin'd to their own palace, ſleep.
From theſe perhaps (ere nature bade her die)
Fate ſnatch'd her early to the pitying ſky.
As into air the purer ſpirits flow,
And ſep'rate from their kindred dregs below;
So flew the ſoul to its congenial place,
Nor left one virtue to redeem her Race.
But thou, falſe guardian of a charge too good,
Thou, mean deſerter of thy brother's blood!
See on theſe ruby lips the trembling breath,
Theſe cheeks now fading at the blaſt of death:
Cold is that breaſt which warm'd the world before,
And thoſe love-darting eyes muſt roll no more.
Thus, if Eternal juſtice rules the ball,
Thus ſhall your wives, and thus your children fall;
On all the line a ſudden vengeance waits,
And frequent herſes ſhall beſiege your gates.
There paſſengers ſhall ſtand, and pointing ſay,
(While the long fun'rals blacken all the way)
Lo theſe were they, whoſe ſouls the Furies ſteel'd,
And curs'd with hearts unknowing how to yield.
Thus unlamented paſs the proud away,
The gaze of fools, and pageant of a day!
So periſh all, whoſe breaſt ne'er learn'd to glow
For others good, or melt at others woe.
What can atone (oh ever-injur'd ſhade!)
Thy fate unpity'd, and thy rites unpaid?
No friend's complaint, no kind domeſtic tear
Pleas'd thy pale ghoſt, or grac'd thy mournful bier.

By foreign hands thy dying eyes were clos'd,
By foreign hands thy decent limbs compos'd,
By foreign hands thy humble grave adorn'd,
By ſtrangers honour'd, and by ſtrangers mourn'd!
What tho' no friends in ſable weeds appear,
Grieve for an hour, perhaps, then mourn a year,
And bear about the mockery of woe
To midnight dances, and the public ſhow?
What tho' no weeping Loves thy aſhes grace,
Nor poliſh'd marble emulate thy face?
What tho' no ſacred earth allow thee room,
Nor hallow'd dirge be mutter'd o'er thy tomb?
Yet ſhall thy grave with riſing flow'rs be dreſt,
And the green turf lie lightly on thy breaſt:
There ſhall the morn her earlieſt tears beſtow,
There the firſt roſes of the year ſhall blow;
While Angels with their ſilver wings o'erſhade
The ground, now ſacred by thy reliques made.

So peaceful reſts, without a ſtone, a name,
What once had beauty, titles, wealth, and fame.
How lov'd, how honour'd once, avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot;
A heap of duſt alone remains of thee,
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud ſhall be!

Poets themſelves muſt fall, like thoſe they ſung,
Deaf the prais'd ear, and mute the tuneful tongue.
Ev'n he, whoſe ſoul now melts in mournful lays,
Shall ſhortly want the gen'rous tear he pays;
Then from his cloſing eyes thy form ſhall part,
And the laſt pang ſhall tear thee from his heart,
Life's idle buſineſs at one gaſp be o'er,
The Muſe forgot, and thou be lov'd no more!

PROLOGUE

TO

Mr. ADDISON's Tragedy

CATO.

TO wake the ſoul by tender ſtrokes of art,
To raiſe the genius, and to mend the heart;
To make mankind in conſcious virtue bold,
Live o'er each ſcene, and be what they behold:
For this the Tragic Muſe firſt trod the ſtage,
Commanding tears to ſtream thro' ev'ry age;
Tyrants no more their ſavage nature kept,
And foes to virtue wonder'd how they wept.
Our author ſhuns by vulgar ſprings to move
The hero's glory, or the virgin's love;
In pitying Love, we but our weakneſs ſhow,
And wild Ambition well deſerves its woe.
Here tears ſhall flow from a more gen'rous cauſe,
Such Tears as Patriots ſhed for dying Laws:
He bids your breaſts with ancient ardor riſe,
And calls forth Roman drops from Britiſh eyes.
Virtue confeſs'd in human ſhape he draws,
What Plato thought, and godlike Cato was:

No common object to your sight displays,
But what with pleasure Heav'n itself surveys,
A brave man struggling in the storms of fate,
And greatly falling, with a falling state.
While Cato gives his little Senate laws,
What bosom beats not in his Country's cause?
Who sees him act, but envies ev'ry deed?
Who hears him groan, and does not wish to bleed?
Ev'n when proud Cæsar 'midst triumphal cars,
The spoils of nations, and the pomp of wars,
Ignobly vain and impotently great,
Show'd Rome her Cato's figure drawn in state;
As her dead Father's rev'rend image past,
The pomp was darken'd, and the day o'ercast;
The Triumph ceas'd, tear's gush'd from ev'ry eye;
The World's great Victor pass'd unheeded by;
Her last good man dejected Rome ador'd,
And honour'd Cæsar less than Cato's sword.
Britons, attend: be worth like this approv'd,
And show, you have the virtue to be mov'd.
With honest scorn the first fam'd Cato view'd
Rome learning arts from Greece, whom she subdu'd;
Your scene precariously subsists too long
On French translation, and Italian song.

NOTES.

VER. 20. But what with pleasure] This alludes to a famous passage of Seneca, which Mr. Addison afterwards used as a motto to his play, when it was printed.

VER. 37. Britons, attend] Mr. Pope had written it arise, in the spirit of Poetry and Liberty; but Mr. Addison frighten'd at so daring an expression, which, he thought, squinted at rebellion, would have it alter'd, in the spirit of Prose and Politics, to attend.

Dare to have ſenſe yourſelves; aſſert the ſtage,
Be juſtly warm'd with your own native rage:
Such Plays alone ſhould win a Britiſh ear,
As Cato's ſelf had not diſdain'd to hear.

NOTES.

VER. 46. As Cato's ſelf, etc.] This alludes to the famous ſtory of his going into the Theatre, and immediately coming out again.
